P R E F A C E .

In preparing this work for publication, the compiler has confined himself to transcribing without comment, the incidents, which combined, form the annals of the family in this country,—allowing the records to tell their own story. It is prefaced with a few extracts from English records, also with extracts from early records in this country of persons of the name of Burt who are not known to be connected with the family of which this work gives the history. Such records, collected in his researches into everything connected with the name, and brought together in this compact form, may be of service to some one wishing to trace back other branches of the family. Here also will be found (what cannot but be of peculiar interest to his descendants) very full extracts from the early records of Springfield, Mass., in which Henry Burt, the emigrant ancestor of this family, appears usually, either as one of those appointed to “lay out the lands of the Plantation to the inhabitants,” or as one of the five men chosen yearly “for the ordering of the prudential affairs of the Plantation,” or “in the Lord’s work on the Sabbath” when Springfield was without a minister. The reason which leads to the giving such records here, rather than at the end of the book, is, that they should not intervene between the printed family records, and the records of the families yet to be formed, and entered in writing in the blank “Family Record” at the end of the volume, for which purpose a book like this seems more appropriate than the family Bible, and for which ample preparation is there made.

In its arrangement, the compiler gives first, the name of the head of the family, with the names of his ancestors in italics, properly numbered with his place of residence; then follows the date of his birth and death; the date of his marriage, with the maiden name of his wife; the date of her birth and death; the names of their children, with dates of their birth, date of marriage, to whom married, and date of death. Following which record a biographical sketch of the heads of the family is given, including the genealogy of the wife, when it has been furnished; also any notice of children who have a history of their own, but do not live to become themselves heads of families. Where dates have not been obtained, and where marriages or deaths have not occurred, blank spaces are left to be filled by each family (in the book in their possession) at their pleasure or as they occur.

Each head of a family has his appropriate number. The figures after the name of the father, grandfather, great-grandfather, etc., etc., refer back to the section in the preceding generations in which the history of each will be found. Against the name of each son who has a family, is placed a number referring forward to the section of that number in the next generation, in which the record of that son and his family is given. There has been no attempt made to follow the female branches of the family, after giving the dates of their birth, marriage, to whom married, and death, as, in assuming another name, they and their descendants belong to another race as well as to this, and will be a part of that family whenever its history is written. At the end of the volume there is a "Family Record" to be used by the coming generations, who, as heads of families, follow their ancestors already recorded in the body of the work. An interrogation point (?) attached to the date of birth of a wife, does not necessarily indicate much uncertainty as to the date being correct, as in several instances the birth of a nameless daughter (entered by the town clerk before a name was given) to the known parents of the wife, is found recorded, with a date to make her of a suitable age at the time of her marriage. In other cases the dates are given by friends from memory. The abbreviations used are b. for born; bap. for baptized; m. for married; d. for died; ae. for aged; gdson for grandson; grgdson for great-grandson, etc., etc. And now, that but comparatively few of the rounds in this ladder leading back, in 1638, to Henry and Ullalia Burt are wanting, and that each member of the family may find upon the different steps, a convenient resting-place to look about him into the past generations of his ancestors, and believing "that of all the affections of man, those which connect him with ancestry are among the most natural and generous," he takes pleasure in passing this work over to the family with which, on his mother's side, he is connected. But before letting it pass from his hands, he wishes to acknowledge his indebtedness to the well-preserved records of Springfield, Mass., to the excellent records kept by Mr. Elijah Colton of Longmeadow, Mass., and by Mr. Sylvester Judd of Northampton, Mass., and to many members of the family who have furnished records of their own lines, among whom should be particularly mentioned, B. B. Burt, Esq., of Oswego, N. Y., Rev. Eben Burt Parsons of Baldwinsville, N. Y., Mr. Rodney Burt Field of Guilford, Vt., Mr. Arthur Burt of New York city, the elaborate records of Mrs. Mary E. Burt of Warwick, N. Y., and Miss Elizabeth Burt of Warwick, N. Y., Rev. Chas. H. Smith of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mr. Fred A. Burt of Springfield, Mass.

The manuscript of this genealogy has been ready for the publishers many years, during which time the compiler has furnished from its pages much information to compilers of town histories and to genealogies of other families intermarried with the Burts.

NAME AND ARMS.

BURT.

The name is probably of Saxon origin, and was formerly spelled indifferently Burt, Birt, and Birte, as is apparent from the similarity of the arms borne by each name under the Norman rule. Burt in English, signifies a kind of fish; in Gaelic, quizzing, joking. Buurt — Dutch — a hamlet consisting only of a few houses: a neighborhood. Burt seems also to be a German name — Von Burt married a sister of Count Von Moltke. "Marshal Von Moltke spends a portion of each day in the mausoleum of his English wife, Mary Burt, standing in profound meditation by the tomb."

FROM ENGLISH COUNTY HISTORIES.

HORNINGLOFT, CO. OF NORFOLK.

Richard de Geel, with Andrew and Henry his brothers, convey by fine to Hamo Buhard or Burt, 40 acres of land in this town and Whissyngete, and Alice their mother resigned her dower therein, in the 10th of Richard I.

By a fine levied in the 5th of King John, Hamo son of Burt, released to John de Grey, Bishop of Norwich, his right of commonage in the town of Elmham and Brisley, as the Bishop did his right in this town; and Hamo had power to inclose the common here, paying to that Bishop and his successors, 2s. per ann.

Sir Hamo de Burt released by his deed, sans date, to Robert le Hendy of Norton, (Pudding Norton,) and to Thomas and John sons of Robert, all his right in certain lands: witness, Hamon de Pattesle, etc., etc.; and one of the same name was lord in the 43d of Henry III and had two sons, Ralph Burt, his eldest son, and Thomas; which Ralph granted by fine to Thomas his brother, in the 54th of that King, this manor and advowson, who covenanted to pay to Ralph for the same an annuity of 20s. for life.

Sir Thomas Burt and Peter de Burun had about this time, a dispute concerning the common . . . ; and in the 15th of Edward I, Sir Thomas claimed the assize, free warren, and view of frank pledge, with the view of the King's bailiff, in this town and in Kypton.

In the 18th of Edward I, Sir Thomas de Burt granted this lordship by fine to Nicholas de Castello and Cecilia his wife, with the advowson of the church; etc., etc., etc.

BURIALS IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

July 17, 1662/3, Dr. Heywood, Prebendary of this Church: at the foot of the pulpit. William Heywood born in the city of Bristol, 1600. He matriculated at Oxford, from St. John's College, 15th Nov., 1616, became a fellow of that College, and was created D.D. in 1636. He was one of the domestic chaplains of Archbishop Laud; Chaplain in Ordinary to King Charles I; Prebendary of St. Paul's 21 Nov., 1631; Rector of Laindon, Essex, 8th Dec. in the same year; Rector of St. Giles in the Fields, Midx., about 1636; and was installed Prebendary of Westminster, 28 Sept., 1638. He suffered great hardships during the Commonwealth, etc.; but recovered all his possessions after the Restoration. His will, dated 12 July, was proved 26 Aug., 1663, by his relict Alice. He left no issue save an only son. He left a legacy to his sister, Ann Burt.

May 2, 1737, Edmund Burt: in the North Cloister. Son of Edmund Burt and Anne Taylour his wife, who were married at St. Martin's in the Fields, Midx., 6 Dec., 1705. He was baptized at St. Margaret's, Westminster, 27 Sept., 1720, and was admitted into Westminster School in 1735. The Funeral Book says that he died 27 April, aged seventeen.

Nov. 10, 1818, Susannah (Burt) Slemaker; Bedford Street, Covent-Garden; died Oct. 31, aged 81: in the South Cloister. She was baptized at St. Margaret's, Westminster, 4 June, 1738, as daughter of Matthew Burt and Elizabeth his wife, and married there 28 April, 1768, to George Slemaker. She died, according to the Funeral Book, at the residence of her daughter Elizabeth, wife of Pitt Cobbett, who administered to her estate. Her children — Susanna, b. Mar. 13, 1769; George, b. Dec. 13, 1770; Elizabeth, b. Sept. 18, 1772; John, b. Sept. 30, 1775, buried Jany. 1, 1778, aged two years and three months, in the South Cloister; Thomas, b. HENRY AND ULALIA BURT.

The names of Henry and Ulalia Burt are not found in the lists of passengers, by any vessel from England to this country. The earliest information we have of the emigrant ancestors of this branch of the family in America, is of their residing for a short time in Roxbury, Mass. On leaving Roxbury, they came to Springfield, Mass., from which time Henry Burt is continually employed in the affairs of the town. Ulalia, the wife of Henry, according to tradition, had nineteen children, and as but twelve are mentioned after their arrival at Springfield, some of the name recorded as living in the eastern part of the State may have been their children, as the dates would allow of it. But we know only of the twelve who accompanied them, or were born after their removal, and final settlement in Springfield; three of them sons whose descendants are recorded in this work.

* One of the family treated of in this book.

THE JOHN BURT HOMESTEAD.

The engraving on the opposite page is a faithful sketch of the John Burt homestead in 1825, and was, probably, at that time, but little changed from its earlier appearance. It is of especial interest both from its local history, and because it shows the general appearance of the land upon which the earliest inhabitants settled, and the division of the same into "home lots." Each settler had allotted to him a strip of land ranging from eight to thirty rods in breadth, and extending from "the uplands" (now Maple and Chestnut streets) westward, crossing the main street, to "ye greate river." Five of these allotments are represented in this sketch. In the background is the Connecticut river, eighty rods west of, and parallel with Main street, upon which the houses front. The Agawam river, which is the boundary between the towns of Agawam and West Springfield, empties into the Connecticut at a point nearly opposite this lot. On the right of this river and bordering the west bank of the Connecticut is "the neck" mentioned in the old deeds, and is now the town of West Springfield, and beyond (eight miles away) is Westfield. On the extreme right of the picture on the most distant range of mountains, just visible through the nearer range, called the Westfield mountains, are the "Blandford hills," the church and hotel on their summit, in the town of Blandford, eighteen miles away, being visible on a clear morning when the sun lights up their east side. On the left six miles off is Feeding Hills, a part of Agawam, and a little farther to the left than is represented in the picture, the church in the town of Granby, Conn., twenty miles away, is visible under favorable conditions. No record has been found of the building of the "old red house." In 1650 it was the home of the unfortunate Hugh Parsons, and his wife Mary, who were the only victims in this town of the witchcraft delusion. In 1652 it became the property of Jonathan Burt (second generation) whose record will be found in its appropriate place in this work. It descended successively through one line of his descendants for six generations, five of whom bore the name of John, and hence was known as the John Burt homestead for 183 years. This house, the one on the left, was known for many years as the "old red house," and is believed to have been the southernmost of the three fortified houses during the Indian war of King Philip, and to have escaped destruction when the town was burned by the Indians on the fatal 5th of October, 1675. It is probable that this house is the one Lieut. Cooper tried so heroically to reach after being mortally wounded near Mill river while reconnoitering the Indian position on the morning of that day, but he was struck by a second shot from the Indians, who were in close pursuit, and died before reaching its friendly shelter. Jonathan Burt lived upon this place till 1715, for the last few years, probably, with his grandson, Capt. John Burt of the fourth generation, to whom the record says (vol. 3, p. 285 of Probate Records) he passed over "his homestead and house lot" in 1712, and in view of which Capt. John's father (John of the third generation) left his homestead "over Mill river" to his second son Samuel. John Burt of the fifth generation was administrator on the estate of his father, Capt. John, and came into possession of the old homestead in 1770 (page 91, book 11, Reg. of Deeds) and lived there till he died in 1794. In 1796 the estate was divided and the homestead passed into the hands of John of the sixth generation (vol. 19, pp. 199, 200, Probate Records). This latter John by purchasing the lot next south, which had previously been the property of Samuel Burt, probably restored the lot to its original size of eight acres, with fourteen rods front on Main street. He died in 1811, and willed his estate (vol. 27, p. 272, Probate Records) to his widow Chloe and her children. The place was occupied by them till 1835. In August, 1834, John Burt of the seventh generation, having had a house lot set off to him on which he had built a house (the right-hand one in the picture) in which he was then living, sold the remainder (the other heirs having previously sold their portions) of the old homestead to Theodore Bliss, who thus became sole owner, with the exception of Chloe's right of dower. She dying, in 1835, the house passed out of the family after remaining therein for one hundred and eighty-three consecutive years. Of the old homestead nothing remained in the family except the land occupied by John's new house. The "old red house" was torn down in 1869, to make room for cutting a street through the estate running from Main street to the river. This street, called Broad street, was divided into thirty-five building lots and is now closely built on both sides with dwelling-houses. Here is also situated the large skate manufactory of E. H. Barney, where is made the Barney & Berry club skate; and also a large coal yard.

John Burt of the seventh generation remained in his new house, built in 1817, on a part of the old home lot, and modeled after the old house, until his death in 1841, when this last fraction of the old estate passed out of the possession of the family. Having followed this venerable old homestead through its history, let us take a parting glance inside the old house. Entering the front door we pass into the hall, ten feet square. Overhead hang five or six fire buckets with the family name painted on each, which every householder was required by law to keep. In front are the stairs which turn two corners in making the ascent. On the right and left are two doors leading into the north and south rooms, respectively, each about twenty feet square, each with an ample fireplace, and alike in general appearance. Turning to the left we pass into the great south room, and old fashioned enough we find it. The furniture is plain and scanty, the floor bare, but white and clean. Here in one corner is the old house clock, more than nine feet high; in another the massive, antique, old secretary, also standing nine and one-half feet high — the bottom a case of four drawers with bright brass knobs, above this a writing desk, and the top a book-case with blank doors surmounted by a peculiar scroll ornament; a table on which lies the old family Bible, and one or two other books, and a few oak chairs complete the furnishing. Passing out into the kitchen, a room about thirty feet long and twelve wide, we find even more of homely simplicity. Two or three straw-plaited Shaker chairs, a large round table turned up and set back close against the wall, and an enormous old "settle" drawn up before the great fireplace is all we find to give comfort to the scene. This "settle" is a decided curiosity. It is a seat about ten feet long with a close back of boards about seven feet high, extending from the floor nearly to the ceiling, and with a spacious box under the seat capable of holding two or three barrels of apples. This rude article of furniture stands with one end against the wall at the side of the fireplace, and the other end is moved to or from the fire, according as it is hot or cold. The great fireplace, six feet long and five feet high, showing a border of nearly a foot of bare bricks within its woodwork, and at the left-hand side the great brick oven is most conspicuous. Here is the immense crane, five feet long, capable of supporting over the fire, as some living descendants of the family have seen, in three large kettles, nearly two barrels of water; and grouped around on the floor and walls are the other numerous and necessary furnishings, such as pot hooks, trammels, andirons, etc. Above, at an absurdly high place, projects the mantel shelf, and above this on pegs are suspended the guns and accoutrements of the family — seldom used now, but which from long association seem inseparable adornments of that locality. On the south end of this kitchen is a small bedroom with doors leading into the south room and kitchen, and at the north end are the pantry and cellar stairs. Up stairs are the north and south chambers, and the “kitchen chamber,” each with a fireplace. The floor of the latter is one step lower than the former, and is occupied with the weaving apparatus that has done good service for several generations. The whole south end is occupied with an immense loom, and here also are cards, reeling, twisting and doubling frames, spinning-wheels and other fixtures with which the good housewives have made the necessary homespun for wearing apparel and domestic uses. Passing down stairs and out through the great kitchen into the “ell,” we come to the “summer kitchen” used in winter for but little else than a storeroom. In the rear of this is the woodshed, and in the end of the ell the “chaise house.” Going to the barn, the chief peculiarity is the position which, as represented in the picture, is on an angle with the house. The barn is about forty feet square. Inside, and running through from side to side, is the barn floor. On the west side, occupying one-half of it, are the cow stables, the other half being a bay; and over the stable is the hay loft. On the side opposite the cattle are the horses and another bay fills out the space. This barn was blown down by a tornado about 1829.

This sketch and history of the old homestead was furnished for the genealogy by Fred. A. Burt, a descendant of the John Burts, its owners.

We first hear of Henry Burt at Roxbury, Mass., where his house was burned, for which loss the General Court made a grant to the town of £8 in November, 1639. He removed to Springfield, Mass., about 1638, and was there clerk of the band and clerk of the writs. He was a lay exhorter at meetings on the Sabbath,† when Springfield was without a minister. Was early chosen one of the five men "by ye general vote and consent of ye Plantation for ye ordering ye prudential affairs of ye towne." Was one of the "six men undernamed shall have full power to lay out the lands both of upland and meddowe, etc.," and his name is constantly appearing, in various positions of trust, on the records. On his death-bed Mr. Burt made a verbal will, which certain witnesses took oath to, and which the Court allowed. By the inventory of the estate, his property amounted to £181, 14s., though there were said to be £50 debts. On the record appears "Henry Burt (ye Clarke of ye writts) dyed ye 30th of April 1662 in ye evening & was buryed May 1, (62)." There is a tradition that Ualia, his wife, was laid out for dead in England, and put in her coffin, but signs of life appearing at her funeral, she recovered, came to New England, and was the mother of nineteen children. Her death in Springfield is thus recorded, "Widow Ualiah Burt was sick & died Aug. 19, 1690." The sons and all but four of the daughters were born before coming to Springfield. Of the daughters, Sarah Gregory married, for second husband, Henry Wakley of Hartford, removed to Stratford; his will dated July 11, 1689. Abigail Ball married, for third husband, Lt. Thomas Stebbins of Springfield. Elizabeth Wright married, Sept. 26, 1684, her second husband, Nathaniel Dickinson of Hatfield, and died there his second wife; he married a third. Mary Brooks removed with her husband to Deerfield, and died there. Wm. Brooks, born 1610, came from London to Va., 1635; was at Springfield, 1653; of Deerfield, 1686, where he died Dec. 30, 1688.

John Stiles, husband of DORCAS, died Dec. 8, 1683, at Windsor, Conn. Their children: Sarah, b. Sept. 12, 1661, m. May 5, 1681, Ephraim Bancroft, who died 1727; she married, for second husband, Thos. Phillips, and died Oct., 1727; Hannah, b. Mch. 23, 1664-5, m. Jan. 21, 1687, Samuel Bliss, and died Dec. 8, 1704; John, b. Dec. 10, 1665; Ephraim; Thomas m. Bethiah Hamner.

President Stiles in his MS. Genealogy of the Stiles family, 1764, thus alludes to John Stiles, husband of Dorcas: "The family tradition says, that a woman and her child paid only a single passage, but double if weaned; and though John was old enough to wean when they came from England, in 1634, yet his mother suckled him during the voyage, and so gained his passage."

John Bagg, husband of HANNAH Burt, died Sept. 5, 1633. Their children were: Hannah, b. July 8, 1658, m. Feb. 3, 1681, Nathaniel Sikes, who died Sept. 15, 1687; she married for second husband, April 7, 1706, Samuel Miller, and died May 13, 1740; Mercy, b. Dec. 23, 1660, m. June 26, 1679, Ebenezer Jones, and died April 7, 1738; Daniel, b. Nov. 10, 1663, d. Dec. 7, 1663; John, b. Mch. 26, 1665, m. Mch. 30, 1689, Mercy Thomas, and died Nov., 1740; Daniel, b. May 12, 1668, m. 1694, Hannah —, d. Aug. 18, 1738; Jonathan, b. Nov. 2, 1670, m. Jan. 7, 1696, Mary Weller, d. Oct. 6, 1746; Abigail, b. Apr. 23, 1673; James, b. Sept., 1675, d. Sept. 18, 1689; Sarah, b. Apr. 2, 1678, m. July 25, 1701, Benoni Atchison, who died Feb. 28, 1704; she married, for second husband, Mch. 11, 1711, Samuel Barnard; Abilene, b. July 25, 1680.

Dea. Jonathan Burt was probably born in England, married Elizabeth Lobdel at Boston, Mass. He was Deacon of the Church in Springfield, was Town Clerk, and recorded the destruction of Springfield by the Indians in 1675, the only record of the event existing. He was still Town Clerk in 1706. In 1649 he is one of the signers of a paper granting land in the plantation, and from that time forward his name is often on the records. As on Nov. 3, 1657, Jonathan Burt was one of the five selectmen chosen to carry on the prudential affairs, etc. Nov. 2, 1658, he is again chosen, etc., etc.; 1662 he was "allowed to be attorney of this County's Court." "A man of note, and deacon." — Savage. The house he occupied was previously owned by Hugh Parsons of witchcraft notoriety.

FROM THE RECORDS.

"On the 5th day of October, in the yeare 1675, a day, to be kept in memory by posterity, when the Barborus heathen made an assault on this poore towne, killed two men and a woman, and wounded severall, one of which dyed some time after, Burned downe 29 dwelling houses and Barns, with much corn and haye, but god did wonderfully preserve us or we had been a prey to their teeth, god in his good providence so ordered it that an Indian gave Intelygence of the enemies desygns to fall on this town, whereby we escaped with our lives for which we should give god the glory. Jonathan Burt being an eye witness of the same."

1694. "Col. John Pyncheon, Esqr., and Deacon Jonathan Burt were appointed to declare to Mr. Daniel Brewer" (the third minister of Springfield) "the town's good resentment of Mr. Daniel Brewer, his answer to the town invitation, and to give him thanks for the same."

In the year 1695, the people on the west side of the river presented to the General Court at Boston their petition for leave to procure a minister for that part of the town. Those living on the east side, not being willing to part with so large and substantial a part of the ecclesiastical body, and being a majority, they passed a vote in town meeting that "something" should be drawn up to send to the General Court to answer the petition of their "neighbors on the west side of the great river," and they appointed Deacon Burt and Lieut. Abel Wright to draw up this "something."

Deliverance Burt, the 2d wife, was widow of Thomas Hanchet of Suffield, Conn., and daughter of George Langton, who had lived in New London, Saybrook, Wethersfield, and Springfield. The daughter Sarah first married Benjamin Dorchester. April 22, 1675, and had by him one son Benjamin; Benjamin, the father, died May 24, 1676; she then married Luke Hitchcock, Esq., as above, and had by him eleven children.

Mr. Burt was one of the first settlers of Northampton, in 1654. His homestead was on King Street. * The ceremony of his marriage to Mary Holton was the first ever performed in Northampton. In 1656 he was chosen one of the measurers of land. His widow married for second husband, 1692 or 3, Joseph Root, and died in Northfield, Mass. She was daughter of Dea. Wm. Holton. † David, the oldest son, was run over by a cart and killed. David, the seventh child, was a soldier at Schenectady, taken by the French and Indians, Feb. 9, 1690, and carried to Canada, whence he never returned. Mary, the daughter, had three children; she married for second husband May 7, 1713, Samuel Belden, the younger, of Hatfield, Mass.; her first husband also was of Hatfield; she was his second wife. John, the youngest child, was one of a war party that started up the river against the Indians. He was killed on Onion River, near Lake Champlain.

28 Aaron.	b. Sept. 17, 1717, m.	, Miriam ELMER	d. 1796.

Mr. Burt, born in Northampton, Mass., after his marriage was a resident of Hatfield, Mass., but before 1717 he "purchased of Ebenezer Bottwood of Berwick, York Co., Province of Maine, all his honored father's rights in Northfield." The house built by Mr. Burt, in Northfield, once painted red, was standing within the memory of many now living. The Burts had a store just north of this house, which was a noted place of business and resort in the early times. Dec. 17, 1717, while still a resident of Hatfield, he is taxed in Northfield, £1. 9s. 4d. In 1751 he is taxed for lot No. 19, 107½ acres, in the fourth division of Northfield. 1723-4, Joseph Burt, of Hatfield, was one of Capt. Joseph Kellogg's Co. who were stationed at Northfield, or were scouting in the woods to protect the inhabitants from the Indians. This Company of forty men (besides continually keeping the watch and ward of three forts at Northfield, with ten of their men stationed at Deerfield) from Nov. 30, 1724, were constantly on the scout far to the north and west in the woods, extending their excursions to West river, the Great Falls, the Great Meadows on both sides of the Connecticut; camping on the tops of mountains as an advantageous lookout for the curling smoke from the red man's campfire, and listening for the report of his gun. The daring and endurance of these handfuls of men, thus striking off into the wild forest in the winter, fording bridgeless streams, and climbing mountains slippery with ice and blocked with snow, would be a most exciting romance, were it not a terrible reality. Mr. Burt was in the Crown Point expedition. He was one of the selectmen of Northfield, 1730, 1734, 1742, 1743. He took a prominent part in town affairs, held many town offices, and accumulated a large estate. — From History of Northfield. Mrs. Burt was the daughter of John and ~~DEBORAH BARTLETT~~ Cowles of Hatfield.

Mr. Burt, on his marriage with Sarah, dau. of Daniel and Elizabeth (Foot) Belden of Hatfield, Mass., settled at Deerfield, Mass., and at the capture of that place, Feb. 29, 1704, was, with his wife, enclave with Christopher (who was born forty-five days after), carried, after a journey of twenty-five days, to Chambly, Canada, by the French and Indians. They were ransomed through the intervention of a son of Gov. Dudley of Massachusetts : sailed from Quebec and arrived in Boston, Aug. 1, 1706, during which voyage their second son was born and appropriately named. Lieut. Sheldon, the commissioner sent from Deerfield to negotiate for the return of the captives, went to Quebec three times before he succeeded in ransoming the Burts, Rev. Mr. Williams and others. The Gov. of Quebec, in order to place the prisoners beyond the reach of Lieut. Sheldon, removed them thirty miles down the river, his object being, it was supposed, to obtain a larger ransom; but Lieut. Sheldon persisted, retaining the vessel at Quebec fifteen days, until June 30th certainly, as his letter to the Gov. of Massachusetts is dated June 29, 1706, in which he says, "I am in hopes of starting to-morrow." This letter was brought by one of the captives that came by land to the Penobscot bay, and the record at the Custom House in Boston is, that the vessel arrived Aug. 1, 1706. Mr. Burt at first made Norwalk, Conn., his home, but May 6, 1712, he purchased land, and soon after settled permanently at Ridgefield, Conn. The deed from the original proprietors of Ridgefield to Benjamin Burt of a twenty-eighth interest in the proprietorship of all the land they then had or subsequently might acquire is still in existence, and is recorded Nov. 28, 1712, in the Book of Records of Ridgefield, where he died in the eightieth year of his age, as appears from the slate headstone at his grave in the Titicus churchyard. Sarah and the children that followed were all born at Ridgefield.

Lovice,	b. May 25, 1752, unmarried.	d. Sept. 27, 1754.

Deacon Moses Burt settled at Wilbraham, then a part of Springfield, at the time of his marriage, as the deed of his farm from Mary Day is dated in that year, 1733. May 7, 1740, he was one of twenty-four petitioners to be set off as a Precinct.

Dr. Stebbins in his Centennial Address at Wilbraham, thus speaks of the arousing of the people immediately after the battle of Lexington. "On the 20th, we may suppose, just as the sun was passing the meridian, a rider was seen coming down the Bay Road at full speed, his horse dripping and smoking with sweat, who barely checked his pace before Samuel Glover's door, and announced the fight, calling upon the 'minute men' to hasten to the rescue. Glover mounts his horse and rides, as he never rode before, down to Jones's and Bliss's, calling on them to come on as he goes. Brewer and Merrick, and Warriner, the captain of the minute men, rush in from the field. The long roll is beaten by Charles Ferry, so that the mountains answer it from Oliver Bliss's to Noah Stebbins's. Merrick mounts his horse and flies down the west road to the Hitchcocks, and the Stebbinses, the Chapins, and the Langdons, by the Seantie. Burt tells his most vigorous son to cross the mountains by Rattlesnake Peak as swift as the winds ever swept over them, and rouse the Crockers, the Cones, the Russells, the Kings, and to stay not his speed till all the men of the south valley, from the corner to Isaac Morris's, were summoned to the march: then to return without delay along the east road by the Chaffees', Hendricks', and Carpenters', and over the mountains by Rev. Noah Merrick's home. It was done as quick and as well as said. 'Edward,' said Isaac Morris to his son, 'bring the horse.' And as soon as he had slung his powder-horn over his shoulder, put his bullets into his pocket, and taken down his trusty gun from its hooks, the faithful steed was at the door, and he was off at full speed on the track of young Burt," etc.

1774, Moses Burt, Sr., signed the non-intercourse covenant.

May 3, 1777, Mr. Moses Burt of Wilbraham, ent. int. of marriage with Widow Lydia Reed of Ellington.

FOURTH GENERATION.

23. DAVID BURT (son of Henry², g¹son of David³, g²g¹son of Henry¹), of Northampton, Mass. :

Mr. Burt was the first merchant in Northampton. The old homestead (the Meadow Gate property) descended to Mr. Burt. He was unfortunate in losing most of his property, but left the Meadow Gate estate to his son Edward.

Mrs. Burt was daughter of Edward and Hannah (Mun) Baker.

Grace Hyde Draper, wife of Edward, came from Boston with Adam Colson. They lost several children, one Nov. 18, 1806. His surviving son, Edward Baker Burt, died at New Orleans. His widow married a second and third husband in some town south of Boston. Simeon and Elizabeth Bartlett had children: Harriet married to Joseph Hall; Sophia married to Theophilus

Mr. Burt started on horseback, near sundown, with Nathaniel Dickinson, to bring the village cows from the meadow. At Pachaug Hill they were fired upon by Indians, Mr. Dickinson's horse was shot, and he was killed and scalped. Mr. Burt's horse was also shot, and himself killed, but he escaped the scalping as the firing alarmed the inhabitants, and the Indians were obliged to leave without his hair. A great-grandson of Mr. Dickinson has erected a monument on the spot to commemorate the event, with this inscription, "Nathaniel Dickinson was killed and scalped by the Indians at this place, April 15, 1747, æ. 48."

Mr. Burt was a merchant in Northfield. In 1748 his name is in the muster roll of a company at Ashuelot River, N. H., serving against the Indians. In 1751 he had lot 60 assigned him, 83½ acres. At a town meeting, called in 1761, Aaron Burt was one of a committee to build the meeting-house. In May, 1764, he sold the committee a lock for the meeting-house. Mr. Burt built a grist-mill as early as 1765, on the lower falls of Pauchaug brook.

Joseph and Mary Burt removed to Westmoreland, N. H. Asahel removed, in 1800, to Kirby, Vt. The town was organized in 1808. Arumah Burt, first selectman, presumed son of Asahel.

Christopher Burt, born in Canada, while his parents were in captivity, married Joanna, daughter of Capt. Samuel Saint John of Ridgebury, Conn.

Samuel, the oldest son, married and had two sons, both in the battle of White Plains, N. Y., and wounded, and both died of their wounds, one within a short time, and the other within a year or two. After that Samuel went to Virginia.

Mary married Thomas Wiggins or William Gannon, and lived and died at Warwick, N. Y. Mr. James Burt thought that Christopher had two daughters, and that one married Thomas Wiggins and the other William Gannon.

Seaborn Burt, as his name indicates, was born at sea, on the return of his parents from captivity in Canada, whither they were carried by the French and Indians, after the destruction of Deerfield, Mass.

He sold his farm in Ridgefield to his brother Daniel, and about 1756 left for parts unknown.

It is thought that Seaborn Burt had other sons, Miles Burt of Hartford and James and John Burt of New York, but, if so, they were probably born after he left Ridgefield.

Elizabeth,	b. Sept. 11, 1768,	m. Sept. 30, 1788,	Samuel Coleman, d. Nov. 11, 1819.

Benjamin Burt was born in Connecticut, and in 1748 purchased a farm near Warwick, N. Y. Here he lived until he was over eighty-eight years old, when, in 1796, he and his wife both died within an hour, and were buried in one grave, in a burial place upon the farm. This farm has been owned by his descendants ever since, and in the old house are (1890) many very old papers in the form of letters, deeds, wills, etc., among them being a letter written at Ridgefield, Conn., May 13, 1753, by Benjamin Burt, the captive, to his son Benjamin, at Warwick.

Anthony Finn was born Sept. 7, 1748; died March 27, 1797. John Welling born June, 1757; died Feb. 8, 1816. Samuel Coleman born Jan. 10, 1761; died Sept. 19, 1806; all of Warwick, N. Y. Benjamin and Johanna P. Burt settled in Pennsylvania. Thomas and ——— Hathorn Burt settled in Chenango Co., N. Y. John and Sarah Burt settled in Seneca Co., N. Y., near Waterloo.

63 James,	b. Oct. 25, 1760,	m. Aug. 15, 1783,	Abigail Coe,	d. Mar. 17, 1852.

In the year 1746, Daniel Burt came from Ridgefield, Conn., and settled upon a farm near the village of Warwick. He soon returned to Connecticut, probably three or four years later, where he remained until 1760, when returning to Warwick, and failing to secure his old farm, he located at Bellvale, N. Y.

When he came from Connecticut in 1760, Daniel Whitney, who married his sister, Thankful Burt, came with him to Warwick and settled.

At the close of the same year Mr. Burt again purchased a farm near Warwick, to which he moved, and on which he resided until his death.

At the organization of the First Baptist Church at Warwick, in 1765, we find the names of his wife, Hannah Burt, Daniel Whitney, and Thankful (Burt) Whitney. The list of members in 1789 is headed with the name of Daniel Burt, Sr.

Mrs. Burt was the daughter of Dea. James Benedict of Ridgefield. At her death she had 524 descendants.

Daniel Sayer died Nov. 26, 1823. Gideon Scott died March 28, 1826.

A daughter of Edy and Ruth Newbury married a man by the name of Whitney, and in the fall of 1875 she was still living at the age of 102 years, in Schuyler Co., N. Y.

Lieut. Burt, 3d Massachusetts Regiment, was killed in the first engagement, in first meeting the enemy with five hundred men, at the battle of Lake George, when many of the officers and men were slain. In the ancient churchyard at Longmeadow there is a monument (a table) bearing this inscription:

“How art thou fallen in the midst of battle; O very pleasant hast thou been.”

“In memory of Lieutenant Nathaniel Burt, who was slain in the memorable battle near Lake George, Sept. 8, 1755, when his Colonel & other brave officers fell—yet a signal victory was obtained over the enemy. Mr. Nathaniel Burt was a deacon of this church, an exemplary christian, a man of public spirit and a good soldier, well beloved at home & in ye army. A concern for pure religion caused his going into ye military service. He died in his 45th year. 2 Chron. 35 and 25: ‘And Jeremiah lamented over Josiah.’”

Dr. Holland pays this tribute to the memory of Lieut. Burt, in his History of Western Massachusetts, vol. ii. pp. 79, 80, 81:

“Longmeadow furnished its troops and its commanders for the French wars. The death of Lieut. Burt seems to have been a marked event in the town. He was the prominent man of the time, in Longmeadow, next to the minister, Dr. Williams, who was at Lake George in the capacity of chaplain, while his deacon was in more dangerous service. Dr. Williams wrote the letter which informed the people of the death of Lieut. Burt, and it arrived on Sunday afternoon, just as the people were assembling for worship. The event with all its incidents, was celebrated by the local poet, Jonathan Stebbins, extensively known in his day as ‘Clark’ Stebbins.”

The following extracts are from the original in Mr. Stebbins’s handwriting, and include only the verses which refer particularly to Lieut. Burt:

* * * * * * *

“He’ll venture far, I know his courage well.
 Fearless of death, he’ll face the Gallie foe,
 Nor turn his back upon the sword or bow;
 Nor all the tawny tribe with Hellish Yell,
 Shall daunt his Mind or Make His Courage fail.

* * * * * * *

At length a Courier the sad tidings brought
 Of a most bloody battle lately fought,
 Between New England Troops and Gallie foe,
 Which spread the Plain with a Promiscuous woe.

But yet no certain Tydings we could hear,
Which held us in suspense Twixt hope and fear,
Until a Reverend Letter Passed the Plain
With the sad, mournful news Brave Burt was slain.

* * * * *

No common life was taken when he fell,
No pen of mine his real worth can tell.
When stood surrounded with a Martial Band
His mien Bespoke him fit for high command;
Stately in body, of a manly form,
Fit to strike terror, or the passions warm,
Facetious, Plesent, Innocent and Grave,
His Lightest airs showed something in him brave,
Airy but Prudent, merry but not Light,
Quick in discerning and in judging Right,
Where he engaged, was faithful to his trust,
In Reasoning Cool, Strong, Temperate and just,
No friend to Slander, a sworn foe to Spight,
Nor quarrelsome, but strong enough to fight

* * * * *

Wherever he was intimately known,
His Gifts and Graces eminently shown;
View him in his Domestic Life, and Care —
Perhaps he shown as Bright as any Where.

* * * * *

The muse is not so blind but she can see
He was not from all imperfections free,
But must Beg Leave most humbly to Declare
That such united virtues are but rare."

Mrs. Burt was the daughter of David and Sarah Chapin of Chicopee, Mass. On hearing of her husband's death she fainted, and was carried from the church, where she was attending service, when the news arrived. She again married, Sept. 17, 1767, the Rev. Dr. Stephen Williams, pastor of the church in Longmeadow.

John Allis, who married Sarah, was from Somers, Conn.

Mr. Burt's first commission as an officer in the Provincial Army was from William Shirley, Capt.-Gen. and Gov.-in-Chief over his Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, dated June 24, 1746, to Daniel Burt as Lieutenant of the company under the command of Capt. Solomon Keys, and being part of the forces raised within the province for an expedition to Canada, the expedition under command of Lieut.-Gen. St. Clair. Second, a commission from Thomas Pownall, Capt.-Gen., etc., to Daniel Burt, dated Mar. 13, 1758, as Captain of a Company in the Regiment commanded by Col. William Williams, raised for a general invasion of Canada. Third, a commission from Thomas Hutchinson, Lieut.-Governor, Commander-in-Chief, etc., constituting, June 9, 1760, Daniel Burt, Major of a Regiment, John Whitcomb, Esq., Colonel, raised in the pay of this Province for his Majesty's service in the ensuing campaign.

From Church-yard: "Daniel Burt, Esq., who died Feb. 27, 1771, in his 68 year. He early in life exposed himself in a dangerous enterprise against the common enemy. And in our late expedition he served as a Captain and a Major, was loved & respected in the army. As a Selectman, a Justice of peace, and as a Representative, he served his Town, County & Country to good acceptance. Having served his generation, by the will of God, he is fallen asleep, and is laid with his fathers."

Mrs. Burt was daughter of Ephraim and Esther Colton of Enfield, Conn.

Capt. David Burt led the Longmeadow minute men in the Lexington alarm, April, 1775. "This morning at 4 o'clock another message. A smart engagement at Concord between the regulars and our people, many killed. 'Tis said houses burnt, women and children killed. More men are going forth. I prayed with a company. David Burt was captain. John Hale lieutenant; sergeants, Ebenezer Colton, Samuel Keep; corporals, Nathaniel Ely, Josiah Cooley, and for privates more Burts, Bliss, Coltons, Stebbinses, David White, John Ackley, and the rest — on the quickstep — off to assist our brethren at Lexington, and as their colors disappear, 'We met,' says Rev. Stephen Williams, 'in the meeting-house for prayers.'"

It is recorded in the newspapers of the time, of an old horse owned by Capt. Burt, that one Sunday, when his master was seriously ill and the family engaged in attendance on him, the horse, through force of habit, at the ringing of the second bell, took his place at the house-porch without chaise or harness. After waiting the usual time, trotted off to the meeting-house, paused at the door, then took his accustomed place under the shed; after service drew up again at the meeting-house door, and then trotted soberly home.

Mrs. Mary Burt, the mother, was the daughter of Capt. Simon and Abigail (Burt) Colton.

Mrs. Eunice Burt, the second wife, was the daughter of David and Eunice Dorchester of Somers, Conn., and at the time of her marriage to Mr. Burt she was the widow of Deacon John Hall of Ellington, Conn.

Solomon, the oldest son, was killed by the explosion of a powder mill situated on Mill river in Springfield, Mass. The mill, owned by his father, was supplying powder to the American army. The explosion, at the time, was supposed to have been caused by an emissary of the enemy. Aaron Field, who married Flavia, was son of Moses and Rebecca Field. Zebulon Betts, husband of Abigail, was from Richmond, N. Y. Eliakim Hall Williams, husband of Mary, was son of Rev. Doctor Nathan Williams, and from Tolland, Conn. William Williams, who married Sarah, was also a son of Rev. Doctor Williams, and lived in Tolland, Conn. Rev. Hubbel Loomis, husband of Jerusha, was settled over the Church at Willington, Conn.

Asa Burt of Springfield and (Granville, Mass.?), was killed by the falling of a tree. A poem of thirty-four verses was written to commemorate the event by the Rev. Lemuel Haines, a colored preacher. The fourth verse states the case, the fifth tells how the accident happened, and the ninth gives the result.

FOURTH VERSE.

"He went into the verdant wood,
 As business did him call,
 A tow'ring tree that by him stood,
 He did attempt to fall."

FIFTH VERSE.

"The tree he cut, and to prevent
 All harm, he backward fled,
 And lo! a cruel limb was sent,
 Which lit upon his head."

NINTH VERSE.

"Before the evening shades were drew,
 Death stopp'd his vital breath,
 His body fell a victim to
 The hands of potent death."

Condensed from a communication in the Cincinnati Emporium:

Judge William Goforth was born in Philadelphia, 1731. At the commencement of the Revolutionary war he resided in New York City. He was one of the first in that city who dared assert the justice of the American cause, and soon received the appointment of Captain. By regular promotion he was made Major, which after some time he resigned, and removed to Pennsylvania. After the Revolution he was elected to the legislature by the largest number of votes cast for any candidate in the city of New York, to which city he returned. In the fall of 1788 he removed to Ohio and received the office of Presiding Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. He was afterwards a member of the territorial legislature. In 1807 he was appointed by the President one of the commissioners for settling pre-emption claims; which appointment he resigned to assist in forming the present constitution of the State. He afterwards was one of the Presidential electors: which terminated his political career. In each of these positions he distinguished himself. As a soldier he had patriotism, courage, and honor; as a legislator he had wisdom and republicanism; as a judge he had integrity and independence; in the domestic relations he shone to the close of his life with a steady and native lustre.

From records kept by Mrs. Sarah Gano Bart:

"William Goforth Son of Aron & Mary Goforth was born in Philidelphia Aprile 1st 1731 at 6- O'clock, their birth place was England, Hull, York Shire."

The compiler regrets not being able to give his descendants. The following records were copied by Miss Josephine E. Tyler, from page 80, Chesterfield, N. H., Town Records:

"On the first day of Jan., 1782, at midnight, Capt. Joseph Burt of Westmoreland, with a letter to President Weare, in which he gave an account of affairs taking place in Chest'fld, & praying that something might be done for the relief of those who were still loyal to the state. According to Capt. Burt's statement, the party that had secured King the morning of the first of Jan., returned to Chest'fld & arristed Lieut. (James) Robertson, whom they were disposed to treat according to the customs of N. Y., that is by whipping him.—But it was very uncertain in Capt. Burt's mind, whether they would really venture to do so. His informant was Mr. Bingham's son, who stated that a number of others had been driven away from their homes that cold night by the visitors, N. Y. men. He himself had gone to Westmoreland to seek refuge. Capt. Burt added: 'The triumphs of the to.* are great, & (they) say that N. Y. dare not come like men, in the day time, but like a thief, & steal a man or two away.' . . . Such was the gloomy state of affairs in this part of the state as described by Capt. Burt & Gen. Bellows.

In Dec. (1876) a 1st company was formed & commanded by Capt. Francis Town.

“ The bugle's wild and warlike blast
Shall muster them no more;
An army now might thunder past
And they not heed its roar.
The starry flag 'neath which they fought,
In many a bloody day,
From their old graves shall rouse them not,
For they have passed away.”

Mr. Burt was born at Ridgefield, Conn., and died at Oswego, N. Y. He removed from Ridgefield to Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y., with his father in 1760, and resided there until 1803, when he moved to Oswego, and took with him his sons Joel, Colvin Bradner, George W., James, and Benjamin. In 1800, he went to Canada by land, and returned in the same way as far as Kingston, where he purchased a canoe, and came in it to Oswego. There he remained for about two days, examining the fall in the river just above the village. Seeing that it was a good mill-site, and ascertaining that the property was owned by Mr. Van Rensselaer, he stopped at Albany on his way home and purchased the land. In 1802, he sent his son C. Bradner Burt to Oswego, who erected a saw-mill on the lot, the first mill of any kind ever erected in Oswego. Bradner returned to Warwick and spent the winter of 1802-3, and in June, 1803, Mr. Daniel Burt moved to Oswego, and divided the lot No. 7 among the five sons that accompanied him. In 1825 or 6, the State erected a dam across the Oswego River in front of the lot, which dam is still in existence, and by it water is furnished to the State (Oswego) Canal, and also to the Hydraulic Canal on each side of the river, and furnishes one of the finest water-powers of the State. The whole of military lot 7 is within the corporate limits of the city. A considerable portion of it has been subdivided into small city lots, and covered with dwellings, and is a handsome portion of the city.

James Burt was born in Bellvale, N. Y. Soon after, his father moved to near Warwick, N. Y., and there the rest of his life was spent. At the time of the Revolution he was an ardent Whig, and active in the defense of the neighborhood against the Tories. He helped to build Fort Putnam, the ruins of which are still to be seen at West Point. He was chosen Lieutenant in a military company, and was at Fishkill, N. Y., at the time the war ended.

He for a long time exercised a controlling influence in the politics of the State, being a member of the State Legislature, either in the Assembly or Senate, from 1797 to 1826, with the exception of a few years; a member of the Council of Appointment in 1807, and an Elector for Presidents Jefferson and Harrison. He was for a long time Justice of the Peace of the Town of Warwick, and for the years 1801, 1802, 1803, and 1811, he was chosen Supervisor.

He was active in his church life, and held the office of Deacon in the First Baptist Church of Warwick, from 1789 to 1852, a period of 63 years.

James Burt

From Portrait.

He was a man of great native force of character; was noted for his benevolence; and his originality is a matter of family tradition. In the old homestead, now occupied by his granddaughter, is an interesting collection of letters and manuscripts of various kinds, the accumulation of many years, and bearing dates varying from 150 years ago to recent times.

Their children were: infant daughter, born Nov. 28, 1814, died the same day; Roderick Henry, born Feb. 27, 1816 (Burnham Genealogy, page 212, No. 142), married May 19, 1841, Katharine Livingston Mather of Middletown, Conn., born May 8, 1822. Their children were: Howard Mather, born Mch. 17, 1842; he was First Lieutenant of Battery H, Fifth Artillery, U. S. A., and Chief of Artillery for the First Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, at the time he was killed at the battle of Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863, aged 21 years; Emily Livingston, born May 17, 1849, died Nov. 10, 1871, aged 22 years.

Mrs. Emily Burnham married a second husband, Hon. Thomas K. Brace of Hartford, Conn., July 31, 1838.

Mrs. Maria Butman married her first husband, Mr. Stephen Cooley, Nov. 12, 1820.

From Springfield Republican of February, 1848:

"The late dispensation of Providence, in removing from amongst us one of our oldest inhabitants, calls for something more than the single line that notes his death in our daily papers; for he was one of the descendants of an old and respectable family who came to settle in the valley of the Connecticut as early as 1662, in the town of Longmeadow. A family whose departed members have left behind them traces of their virtues and public spirit, in the tradition and memories of the neighborhood in which they lived and wrought.

"The subject of this notice was Calvin Burt, who recently died at the advanced age of 86. To those who have lived with and around him, he needs no passing eulogy—for his was a character singularly transparent. Honest and upright in all his dealings, whose word was his bond, whose truthfulness inspired your confidence, without the least questioning, and in whose presence you felt that suspicions could not come. Strong and sincere in his friendships, and ever ready to do a kind act for others, yet asking nothing for himself. In these days this is no faint praise. But still better and higher than this, he was one who forgot not his eternal interests, while pursuing with cheerfulness his earthly pilgrimage among his fellowmen. His Bible was his daily companion, and from it he drew instruction for his life, his preparation for his calm and peaceful death, and his hope of acceptance with God in his final home in Heaven.

"The writer of this brief notice had been intimately acquainted with him for some years past, and regrets that an abler pen could not be found to pay a just tribute to his memory. Yet at the same time, it is a gratification to him, that he is enabled to say this much of one with whom his intercourse was ever pleasant, friendly, and affectionate.

"Peace be to his ashes. May his virtues and his good example be cherished and imitated by all who knew him, and while we would write his good deeds in brass, may his few errors (for none are perfect) be written in water. H."

From Springfield Republican of December, 1833:

"At Longmeadow, on Sunday the 22d inst., very suddenly, Mrs. E. S. Burt, the wife of Calvin Burt, Esq., aged 75 years. In making a record of this afflictive event, we think the points of excellence which were so peculiarly prominent in the character of the deceased demand something more than a passing notice of her exit. By those who knew her worth, it will not be regarded as fulsome panegyric to represent her as, of wives, one of the most winning and affectionate; of mothers, most anxious and tender-hearted, ardently loving as beloved; of neighbors and friends, most benevolent and sincerely kind—long to be remembered as such by the poor, the sick, and the afflicted, to whom she so often ministered; and as the crown of all her excellences, a modest, serene, and consistent Christian. Although surrounded with the blessings of prosperity, she never appeared to be greatly elated; and though often and keenly afflicted, she surrendered, with astonishing fortitude, to the ruthless hand of death, in quick succession, four of the eight children whom she had reared with a mother's fondness—snatched too from the midst of active life and raised expectation. Possessed of a countenance singularly youthful and mild, with the language of kindness dwelling upon her lips, and with sympathies ever awake to human woe and want, it is not surprising that she won so largely on the affections of husband, children, and friends. But her countenance is changed, her benevolent hand no longer ministers, her work is finished: and while the hearts of many are wrung with anguish, may all who witnessed emulate the many excellent features of her example.

Elam Burt removed with his family to Charlestown, N. Y., and died in Schoharie. Loice or Lois, the mother, was daughter of Capt. Timothy and Elizabeth Bliss. The records of the family are not what the compiler could wish. Mr. C. S. Burt of Dunlieth, Ill., writes me, Dec. 17, 1877, that his grandfather's name was Oliver; his father's aunts were Eunice, who died in Springfield, unmarried; another married a Lombard. Elizabeth married an artist, whose name was something like Skepper. Mary married an Atwater. Loice married a Bedford. Mr. Charles Silas Burt writes me from East Dubuque, Ill., Oct. 17, 1879, that his grandmother's name was Lois Bliss Burt; that he was born at Waterloo, Grant Co., Wisconsin, May 11, 1838; married, Sept. 11, 1861, Marianna Blanchard of Concord, N. H., daughter of Charles P. Blanchard; she was born March 15, 1841. Their children: Angelo R., b. Aug.

Lieut. Burt, an officer in the Revolutionary army, was born in Springfield, Mass.; removed, with his father, to Hawley, Mass.; in 1778 to Deerfield; in 1800 to Guilford, Vt.; in 1813 to Adams, Jefferson County, N. Y.; in 1837 to Copenhagen, N. Y., where he died.

Mrs. Burt was daughter of Capt. Thomas and Prudence (daughter of Francis and Hannah Smith of Bolton, Conn.) Dickinson. He was born April 6, 1718, and died April 8, 1814. She was born March 2, 1718, and died Oct. 11, 1808. They were married May 22, 1745, and resided in Deerfield, Mass. He was a captain, and very prominent during the Indian and Revolutionary wars. He was commissary of supplies for the Massachusetts troops stationed in the Connecticut River valley. He was also a noted horseman, and a celebrated hunter. He was the son of John and Hepsibah (daughter of Lieut. Thomas and Hepsibah Wells, Jr.) Dickinson. He (John) was born Nov. 1, 1667, and died Dec. 21, 1765. She was born in 1688, and died in 1773. She was, in the night of June 6, 1693, struck with a tomahawk by Indians, and left for dead: but, it being a glancing blow, she was only stunned, making a bad wound on the side of her head, which she carried to her grave.

Elihu Field, born in Deerfield, Mass., June 16, 1781, married Pamela Burt, as above, and died Sept. 3, 1864. He was son of Elihu and Hepsibah (Dickinson) Field. He removed to Guilford, Vt., with his father, in 1787. He was a prominent man in town affairs, member of the Constitutional Convention of Vermont in 1836, member of the Legislature, and the first postmaster of Guilford, appointed Jan. 1, 1819; held the office twenty years. Children of Elihu and Pamela (Burt) Field: Rodney Burt, b. Feb. 25, 1809; Cora Arabella, b. Dec. 30, 1810, m. Aug. 15, 1836, Samuel Houghton, Jr., of Guilford, d. March 7, 1875; Laura Pamela, b. He was a member of the last Constitutional Convention of Vermont, June 10, 1870; also member of the Legislatures of 1870-1, 1872-3; and has held various town offices; was appointed postmaster in 1865, which office he now (1876) holds.

Mrs. Burt was daughter of Richard and Mary Corliss (Kimball) Chamberlin of Hull, L.C.

Capt. Israel Kellogg, b. Aug. 2, 1782, m. Honor Burt, as above, and d. May 11, 1875. Their children: Dickinson Burt, b. in Copenhagen, N. Y., Dec. 30, 1818, m. Sept. 1, 1841, Cornelia S. Ersletine of Cape Vincent, N. Y.; Alfred H., b. Nov. 21, 1821, m. Mary Bartlett; Eliza A., b. May 5, 1828, m. 1851, George A. Sacket, died in Chicago, Ill., April 3, 1862, suddenly, while opening a door.

Capt. Kellogg was b. in Colchester, Conn.; removed in 1806 to Copenhagen, Lewis County, N. Y.; in 1865 to Holly, Orleans County; in 1870 to North Tonawanda, Erie County, N. Y., where he died. He was commissioned captain by Governor Daniel D. Thompson, and commanded a company at the battle of Sackett's Harbor, N. Y. He served under General Brown on the frontier during the war of 1812. A paper containing an obituary notice speaks of him as a gentleman of the true old New England type, and as remarkable for strict integrity, and as leaving a memory without a stain.

Daniel Griffin, b. in 1792, m. Harriet Burt, as above; d. Aug. 16, 1869. Their children: Bradley Augustus, b. Dec. 20, 1815, m. April 11, 1846, Othioni Jenks, she b. Luther Burt was a pioneer in Delaware County, southern New York, having emigrated there from Springfield, Mass., before the year 1800. He was there during the war 1812 and suffered all the deprivations of a new country devastated by war, and the scenes, as described by him at its close (1815), are thrilling. Their farms were necessarily neglected to a great extent, which cut off the supply of provisions. The year was cold, had frost every month during the year; half-starved Indians roamed over the country, and mothers with large families were left without adequate provisions, many of them having only cakes made of sifted bran with a little milk. Cotton cloth was seventy-five cents a yard, and calico one dollar. With the aid of their winter school teacher, they, that had a little to spare, managed to establish a library of two hundred and fifty volumes, and it was located at the house of James Vaill, brother-in-law of Mr. Burt. It proved a mine of literary wealth to the people in the community, and the knowledge and general intelligence gained was of no meager importance. School books only consisted of Webster's spelling-book, which had just taken the place of Dilworth; and a geography with maps was unknown, only questions and answers to be committed to memory, with no idea of locality.

James Vaill married Helena Compton, sister of Mrs. Burt. Both men are described as being of noble character, of excellent repute for honesty and truthfulness, and men of great general benevolence, always having enough and something to spare for the needy from their industry and economy.

Eli Stewart, husband of Mary, died Jan. 18, 1856. Their children: Harlow L., b. March 4, 1814, d. Jan. 28, 1848; Rose Ann, b. March 16, 1815; Auburn, b. Aug. 16, 1816; Louisa, b. Martin Burt was born in New Hampshire (probably in Westmoreland) Dec. 7, 1783 or '84. Deprived by death at an early age of a father's care, the support, to a great extent, of a widowed mother and her young family fell on him. But he seemed from the first to enter the stern conflict of life with an energy and manliness beyond his years. In 1815 he visited Batavia, New York, where he married Miss Abigail O'Flyng, by whom he raised ten children, two others dying in infancy. In 1816 he sought out a home in the rolling prairies of the then almost unknown wilderness of "the far west." The letters written back by him to his wife and numerous friends caused many a hamlet to dot that beautiful wilderness, helping to form the nucleus of those now powerful States. He settled in Missouri in 1818; but found he could not with safety to himself and family stay there and advocate his life-long principles of liberty for the down-trodden, principles with him as strong as the free wild winds that swept the rugged hills of his old New England home. From Missouri he moved to Illinois, and finally in 1839 settled in Wisconsin, living in that State till 1852, when he set his face towards the Pacific slope. In 1853, after a wearisome journey of five months, often through lands of hostile Indians, he reached his home in Oregon (Douglas Co.), having in the course of his life traveled, by the old slow modes of travel, it might be said, from the rising to the setting of the sun. Here, crowned with his white hairs, in all the fire of youth, he labored still both night and day in the cause of his religion and for liberty to all. For this the vile assassin thirsted for his blood. But his cruel schemes were thwarted. The only one commissioned to take that noble life was he so often called the "King of Terrors;" but not to him a King of Terrors, he came at last with the message, "Come up higher," and on the 5th day of Dec., 1872, he laid aside the toil-worn garments of life, to sleep the sleep of the just. He was a millwright by trade, but usually owned and lived on a farm, at one time a mill. Though confining himself to the humbler walks of life (having declined all invitations to come out on any ticket for office) he was considered by friend and foe as one possessed of a superior mind,—a mind unusually well stored with all that could be gathered in so long a life, extending from so near the birth of our great nation.

Mr. Burt was born at Ridgefield, Conn., married Eunice, daughter of Jeremiah Howe; settled in Auburn, N. Y., in 1796, as a physician. The organization of St. Peter's (Episcopal) church took place in his house in 1808. He was elected one of the first wardens, and held the office for 34 years. He was one of the building committee, and that was the first church erected in Auburn. Mr. and Mrs. Burt are buried in the yard of St. Peter's church. The family in Auburn have fine portraits of both of them. He was educated in the stern school of Connecticut morals, with habits of industry, strict integrity, and a high sense of moral right, which, through life, formed the basis of every action.

Miss Nancy Elizabeth Burt resides in the original Burt homestead on South street, Auburn, built about 1813.

In David Burt's own handwriting: "I was raised here, a wilderness, as it was in 1789. I had but little chance for education. But in an early day I formed a scheme of life. Endeavored to inform myself as fast as possible. For Knowledge was my greatest object. Not so much for wealth or office but a comfortable living and a profound knowledge of Nature." (His thirst after knowledge gave him the name of Philosopher.) "I was always pleased with land and thought it the best I could get. There was large tracts of unsettled lands at that time back from the river. But the title at that time was not known to us. I secured much but did not like to improve them at a risk. Made farming my occupation. And gave to each of my children from 125 to 150 acres."

“LETTER FROM A DEERFIELD CAPTIVE—AN INTERESTING HISTORICAL REMINISCENCE.

“RIDGFIELD, May the 13th, 1753.

“Son Benjamin be so good as to get your Brother Christopher a cow and place it to my aecompt and I will Ecept it as ye money from you and I will See you paid that Seven pounds he owes you So Soon as we have opportunity to See one another.

“When you deliver him ye cow take a note for the cow and that Seven pounds upon Interest In my name and when you come here I will Settle ye affair with you.

“These from your father

“BENJAMIN BURT.”

The writer of the above letter was the great-great-grandfather of John M. Burt of this place, who has the letter in possession. It was written to his son Benjamin, who had settled here in 1745, in company with his brothers Daniel and Christopher, and sister Thankfull, who married Daniel Whitney. In 1702 the writer married Sarah Belden, and settled at Deertfield, Mass. In February, 1704, the French and Indians from Canada made a raid upon the place and burned it, capturing the inhabitants with great slaughter, and carrying many of them prisoners to Canada. Among them was Benjamin Burt and wife; and on that perilous midwinter journey she gave birth to her first born son, Christopher, the subject of the above letter. The prisoners were exchanged in 1706, and Mr. Burt settled in Norwich, Conn. On the exchange they returned by ships going down the St. Lawrence River, and it was on this voyage that the second child was born to Mr. Burt, being given the significant name of Seaborn Burt.

In 1714 the proprietors of Ridgefield, Conn., offered him an interest in their purchase on condition that he establish a blacksmith shop there, which he did, and resided there until his death in 1759; and his remains were buried there, a modest slate headstone still marking his grave. At the time of the burning of Deerfield the Indians carried with them the church bell, which was one of the objects of their raid. This same bell now hangs in an old mission church at Caughnawaga, Canada, where its silvery notes now call to prayer the descendants of the savages from whom, 181 years ago, its tones warned the inhabitants of Deerfield to flee for their lives. This old Indian church still stands, and was pointed out to the writer last June, when the State Press Association excursionists were entering the Lachine Rapids, on a steamer piloted by a famous member of the Indian tribe. The village of unpronounceable name, with its odd-looking buildings and the old church, lie close to the water's edge; but the river being broad at that point, they were about two miles or more from the steamer."

He was a man highly respected by all; one who was frequently appealed to for advice and help, and was given many important trusts as administrator and executor of estates, etc. In 1845, he was elected supervisor of the town of Warwick. He was Vice-President of the Warwick Valley Railroad from 1864 to 1881, and President of the Chester, now Chester National, Bank of Chester, N. Y., from 1855 to 1881. He married a daughter of Charles Gillette. William Moore Sanford was born Aug. 22, 1827, d. Aug. 17, 1887; residence, Warwick, N. Y. Theodore Martine was born Jan. 20, 1833, d. Apr. 13, 1885; residence, Warwick, N. Y. James Hoyt Miller was born Sept. 20, 1837, and died March 31, 1869; residence, Warwick, N. Y. Mrs. Lydia (Burt) Miller remarried Nov. 5, 1884, Wm. Lewis Stewart of Arlington, N. J.; he was born April 18, 1843.

CHILDREN.

- 271 Silas W., b. Apr. 25, 1830, m. Sept. 25, 1855, Nettie Ferrel. d.
 Abbie C., b. May 30, 1834, m. Aug. 1, 1857, Dr. H. E. Talbot, d. Nov. 6, 1857.
 272 James, b. Aug. 15, 1836, m. Oct. 18, 1865, Eureka Guion, d.
 273 Thos. M., b. Sept. 7, 1839, m. Oct. 7, 1867, Harriet E. Howell, d.
 274 Charles A., b. Nov. 4, 1841, m. Sept. 28, 1864, H. E. Coventry, d.

Major Thomas M. Burt was reared upon and participated in the labors of the paternal farm. Subsequently he was Journal Clerk of the State Senate during seven annual and two extra sessions of the Legislature of the State of New York. Afterwards he was for about ten years one of the proprietors of the Albany Argus, which was then the official State paper. Immediately after his connection therewith was dissolved he published for nine months a political campaign (weekly) paper called the Rough Hewer—one of the first, if not the first, of that class of publications in the United States. It was devoted to the support of Martin Van Buren for reelection to the presidency. Again, he was employed for about five years as Superintendent of the incorporated Bank Department, under Comptrollers A. C. Flagg and Millard Fillmore. Early in the year 1861 he was appointed by Governor Morgan, Lieutenant-Governor Jones, and Comptroller Dennison, Agent for the disbursement of $50,000, appropriated by the Legislature of the State of New York for the relief of the people of Kansas, whose crops were cut off by an unusual and protracted drought in the summer and autumn of 1860. Soon after his return from Kansas he was appointed by Governor Morgan Auditor of accounts for money expended by him (about $3,000,000) in raising, organizing, and equipping thirty-eight regiments of volunteers, pursuant to an act of the Legislature. These troops, as soon as prepared for the field, were placed at the disposition of the general government, and were mustered into the service of the United States. Early in September, 1861, he was appointed Paymaster in the United States Army by President Lincoln, and served in that capacity until about a month before the close of the war, chiefly in the Army of the Potomac, though a short time at Port Royal, S. C., where he witnessed the bombardment and surrender of Fort Pulaski, and the battle on James Island, near Charleston. He was afterward stationed for a short time in each of the cities of New York, Hartford, and Albany.

Mrs. Lydia Burt was the daughter of Sherebiah and Lydia (Pettingill) Butts of South Hadley, Mass., and her (Lydia Pettingill's) mother was a Burnham. They removed from Canterbury, Conn., to South Hadley.

OBITUARY — THOMAS M. BURT.

In the death of Major Thomas M. Burt this community has sustained a great loss. Though born at Warwick, in the county of Orange, he had resided so long in Kinderhook, had been so active in every useful enterprise, and was so intimately connected with its interests that this village regarded him with all the honor and esteem that could be bestowed upon a cherished native son. Though not constantly prominent before the public, he had filled many places of dignity and responsibility. From 1830 to 1840 he was connected with the Albany Argus, and was a member of the firm of Croswell, Van Benthuyzen & Burt. Those were the days of glory of the Democratic party. It was all-powerful in the State and nation. Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren occupied successively the position of President of the United States, while some of the most brilliant minds ever numbered in that organization were its representatives in the halls of Congress. During those years the Argus was the accredited party organ in the Empire State, and wielded a mighty influence in moulding and directing public sentiment. Under the skillful control of that successful and accomplished journalist, Edwin Croswell, it became one of the most effective agents ever engaged in partisan contests. It is sufficient to say that Mr. Burt discharged the duties then devolved upon him with the ability, accuracy, and untiring industry characteristic of the man. During his connection with the Argus and his subsequent position in the office of the Comptroller of this State he was brought into intimate official and personal intercourse with many of the leading politicians and public men of that period. That eminent lawyer and distinguished judge, Greene C. Bronson; that pure-minded and gifted statesman, Silas Wright; that judicious and incorruptible financier, Azariah C. Flagg; and that patriotic and noble soldier and civilian, John A. Dix, were among his friends and associates. The last letter which Silas Wright ever penned was addressed to Thomas M. Burt, and the high regard entertained for him by General Dix was only a short time since strikingly exhibited in a special invitation to be present at the ceremonies attendant upon his inauguration as Governor of this State.

Mr. Burt was an active and influential member of the Free-soil party of 1848, a true and reliable Republican from the commencement of that organization, and an earnest and energetic supporter of the government during the whole of our recent struggle for national life and national supremacy. Though his age might well have excused him from personal service in the field, he did not feel warranted in availing himself of that privilege; and when, unsolicited, he was appointed by President Lincoln to the responsible position of Paymaster in the army, he accepted the office, and during the whole of the rebellion continued in the constant discharge of its duties, to the increase of his own reputation, to the advantage of the people, and the satisfaction of the government.

Major Burt was a man of great strength of mind, of decided convictions, sterling integrity, and true purity of character. There was no artificiality in his nature. His habits and tastes were simple, his modes of thought and methods of action were direct, and his adoption of any course of conduct or his advocacy of any project was influenced not by its availability or popularity, but by its conformity to the unalterable standard of unbending rectitude and integrity. As a public servant, a citizen, and a man, he discharged every duty with fidelity and honor, and has gone to his grave leaving to his kindred and friends the rich legacy of an unblemished reputation and a stainless life.

ANN ROBINSON BURT.

SIMEON BURT.

From the New York Times we copy the following notice of Major Burt:

"Many persons familiar with the political affairs of the State during the days of Democratic ascendancy will learn with regret of the death of Thomas M. Burt, who died at his residence in Kinderhook on the 14th inst., in the seventy-fourth year of his age. As a member of the firm of Croswell, Van Benthuyzen & Burt, State printers and publishers of the Albany Argus, Mr. Burt was extensively known throughout the State, and universally esteemed for his kindly disposition, sound judgment, and unquestioned probity. The political relations of Mr. Burt were such as to bring him into intimate acquaintance with Martin Van Buren, Silas Wright, Wm. L. Marcy, Azariah C. Flagg, John A. Dix, Jonas Earll, Greene C. Bronson, and other controlling spirits in the Democratic party, and he enjoyed in an eminent degree the confidence and esteem of those distinguished men, while he also commanded the respect of all classes of society for his sterling but unostentatious virtues. As Paymaster to the army during the late war, Mr. Burt was frequently called to the discharge of arduous duties; but these were performed with such unfailing kindness and scrupulous fidelity as to win the regard of all who were brought into contact with him, while his methodical business habits won the admiration of the accounting officers of the government.

"In the various relations of husband, father, friend, and citizen, Mr. Burt fulfilled the duties involved with a kindness and hearty sincerity which endeared him to all. Though of late years measurably withdrawn from public view, and passing his days in the quiet seclusion of his country home, there are thousands scattered throughout the State who will remember him, but who will be cheered by a knowledge of the fact that his death was as peaceful and triumphant as his life had been useful, honest, and virtuous."

Martha E., b. Dec. 3, 1809, m. April 8, 1835, Samuel Loomis, d.

The compiler is indebted to Mrs. Martha E. Loomis, the daughter, for the following biography.

Rev. Enoch Burt was born in the town of South Wilbraham, Mass. At the age of twelve years he made the calculations, with a stick, on the bottom of the cellar, for a clock, then made his wooden clock with his knife. The clock was used for years for its novelty, and it kept good time. Next, we find him in the office of his physician at Springfield, and while recovering, he employed his time with the books of the office. After his recovery, he engaged himself to Mr. Henry Sargent to learn the trade of watch and clock-making, and remained with him after his time was out, until what is here known as the great revival. Becoming a subject of that work, he turned to the ministry and began his preparations for entering college; being poor, he was obliged, at times, to work and teach to enable him to pursue his studies. After graduating at Princeton, in 1805, he entered the seminary at Princeton, New Jersey. While there, he repaired and kept in order the apparatus of the college, some of which was nearly destroyed, while the troops held possession of the town, in the old war. After closing his seminary course he was ordained as a missionary, to what was then known as the Western Reserve. I think that he was ordained at West Hartford by Dr. Perkins. Unaccompanied by his wife he spent two years as a missionary; he then returned to Princeton, and soon was settled over the church in Lamington, N. J., and remained there a few years. Then he took his family South for about three years; he did not settle, but preached where he seemed to be needed. Returning again, 1820, to the home of his birth, he was persuaded to preach in Holland, Mass., 1821, but as they could not support a minister, he went, 1824, to Manchester, Conn. After a few years, in 1828, he resigned his charge but continued his residence, and there he and his second wife are buried. Martha, the mother, died at Lamington, N. J. Martha E., the daughter, was divorced from her husband, Feb. 22, 1858. He (Rev. E. Burt) was the inventor of a machine which, attached to a common loom, regulated and counted the threads in making plaid goods, also a stop motion to stop the loom when the filling thread broke.

The Davis Place, situated between Portchester and Rye. N. Y., the compiler thinks the most perfect country seat imaginable. As you enter the private drive on the side from Portchester, the road winds for some little distance among small hills, charmingly wooded, until, on approaching the house, it rises to the highest point in the grounds of fifty acres. The entrance road from the direction of Rye, with its gate lodge of granite, and its occasional glimpses of Long Island Sound in the distance, is also pleasant till the porte cochère is reached. The long frontage of the grounds on Long Island Sound is picturesque, having cliffs, bathing beach, and convenient place for the boathouse, with grounds charmingly diversified, and with small islands and projections of land softening the water view. The house, situated near the center of the grounds, is built massively of granite, quarried on the place, and has all the internal finish that money can procure. The garden, with its glasshouses for every purpose, is suited to the place, and the granite stable and carriage house accommodate many horses and vehicles. The compiler is familiar with the place, as he has often visited his cousin, Mrs. Davis : and his perfect appreciation of its combined charm of nature and art is his excuse for this notice.

John Burt was born at the old homestead, recently demolished, the site of which is now the corner of Main and Broad Streets. He was connected with the National Armory at Springfield from Jan., 1812, for nearly thirty years, until Sept., 1841, within three months of his death. When, in 1812, the rumor that Boston was to be attacked by the British was first received at Springfield, John Burt immediately determined to join the company then forming for its defense, but the government officers at the armory refused their consent, on the ground that he was of more service to the country in making arms than in using them. He was married to Sally Moor on a Sunday by Rev. Samuel Osgood, D.D. His house was built on land inherited from his father, a few rods north from his old home.

He owned a very large amount of land, and personally attended to its cultivation, in addition to his duties at the armory. The several teams employed upon his farm were used in winter, when river navigation was closed, in drawing coal, iron, and miscellaneous freight from Hartford. He was for many years a member of Engine Company No. 3, and furnished horses for its use. In March, 1817, he became a charter member of Hampden Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, and in 1819 a Royal Arch Mason in Morning Star Chapter, and continued in honored affiliation until his death.

A deed recorded in the registrar's office in 1813, wherein John and his brother Calvin remise their very considerable claim in their deceased father's estate to their mother Chloe for the remainder of her life, illustrates somewhat his character. She lived for twenty-two years in the enjoyment of their benefaction. He was a man of sterling integrity, kind and affectionate in his family, and respected by all who knew him.

His oldest son, John Morgan Burt, was at an early age sent to Monson Academy, but one day, being locked in his room for some youthful indiscretion, he made his escape by jumping from an upper-story window, holding an open umbrella, and ended his academic course by running away home. He then let himself to a farmer in Blandford. While plowing one day with a yoke of oxen he discovered an owl's nest; and driving the plow under a snag, he climbed the tree, secured his owls, and leaving the oxen in the furrow, started for home, which he reached in the night; and, ascending a ladder, he passed through the window to his room, where the family found him next morning asleep in company with his two owls. When about fourteen years old he made his first voyage to Turks Island, W. I. His second voyage was on the schooner Spark of New London to the Falkland Islands after seal, which occupied about a year and six months. He then shipped for a whaling voyage, and after its completion returned to Springfield. One day, as he was on the river with his brother Benjamin, then about nine years old, he hailed the Hartford-bound steamer; and, finding his little brother could row the boat ashore, he secured a passage. Thus, without a change of clothing, and, so far as was known, without money, and without the knowledge of any one, he left home; and, as it has proved, never to return. He was heard from in 1832 by letter, stating that he had sailed from Philadelphia with a Capt. Loper; but, with the exception of having been met, a short time subsequently, by a friend of the family in Charleston, S. C., nothing has since been heard from him. It is not known that he ever married.

Henry W. Edwards was born Aug. 4, 1810; married on a Sunday to Sarah Angeline Burt. They have no children. Andrew Jackson, eighth child of John and Sally Burt, remained with his mother until her death; afterward in the family of his sister, Sarah A. Edwards. He never married.

Mr. Joseph Burt's life has been closely identified with the early settlement of Michigan. He was an early and zealous member of the M. E. church, and his zeal in devotion was typical of the energy which characterized his life in social and business relations. He came to Southern Michigan in 1829; bought a farm in Washtenaw County; and, besides his duties as farmer, was a large manufacturer of brick, a contractor, and builder of houses. Several of the churches and public buildings of that portion of the State still bear witness to the labor of his hands. Mrs. Burt was the daughter of Spencer and Sarah Driggs. The following extract is from an obituary notice of Mrs. Minerva Burt, published in an East Saginaw paper: "When about 20 years of age she was married to Joseph Burt, then a widower with four children; and two years later removed with him to the wilderness of Michigan. To his children and to her own growing family she became a mother in the truest sense of the word, at a time when the exigencies of pioneer life developed a versatility of gifts and practical heroism unequalled by anything demanded of the present generation. She made their clothing, braided their hats, knit their socks, cooked their dinners, illustrated their lessons, settled their quarrels, and made their home out of the crude material afforded in that early time. The duty of preparing in those primitive homes the young for the more cosmopolitan life of the world, which the introduction of railroads and multiplication of schools and books at that time made general, was one requiring all the energies of the mother's heart and brain; for, while the fathers were wrestling with the elements of pioneer life for the physical necessities of existence, it was mainly the mothers who lifted the feet of their children over those many places."

Jonathan and Emily Gorton have two children, names and ages unknown. Philip and Sylvia Edington have children: Harriet, b. Dec. 3, 1837, m. 1859 Thomas Patterson, d. May 7, 1878, in Placer County, Cal.; James, b. Jan. 16, 1843; Thaddeus, b. Sept. 17, 1847. Champlin and Amanda Rollo's children are: Charles, b. Oct. 10, 1842; Albert, b. Jan. 7, 1844, d. in Union Army, July 8, 1864; Alice, b. July 25, 1847. Champlin Rollo died Aug. 5, 1872. John S. and Ellen R. Estabrook's residence was East Saginaw, Mich. She left one child, Winnifred, b. March 4, 1863.

Dr. Samuel Smith Garrigues, husband of Adèle Mariè, is, and has been for twelve years, State Salt Inspector for the State of Michigan. Their children are: Edwin Clendenin, b. June 2, 1865; Ellen Elizabeth, b. June 10, 1869. Their present residence is Washington, D. C. Dr. Garrigues, a descendant of Jean De La Garrigue of Languedoc, France, and son of Edward B. Garrigues of Philadelphia, was born Sept. 17, 1828. After graduating at the College of Pharmacy in that city, he went to Germany, where, at the University of Gottingen, he spent three years in study, taking the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Before returning to America he made an extended tour of the Continent, visiting the principal mines of Austria, and thoroughly studying the flora of Europe,* with a view of making his chosen profession, chemistry, available in the manufacture of vegetable and mineral medicines, but relinquished this design to accept the position he now holds in Michigan. He was surgeon of the 29th Regiment of Michigan Infantry during the war. Eight years of Mrs. Adèle Garrigues's early life was spent in teaching in Kentucky. From her experience acquired at that time, before the abolition of slavery, she expresses the opinion that "the present generation of southerners can never become, in any true sense, a republican people." She is at present (1878) a correspondent of the newspapers, and remarks: "I hope I have written nothing meretricious; and if I have occasionally slipped in a truth in too plain a form to be entirely palatable, it has been my only triumph." She is also at work upon a continuous story, which would, except for sickness, have been published last fall.

ST. LOUIS.

EDITOR Michigan Pythian:—As the years pass over our heads we note advancing age and are reminded that the most active of our numbers must bare the head to the all conqueror, Time. When a lodge of Pythians is so constituted that its membership is drawn from nearly every age, and among its ranks perchance there may walk a veteran with gray locks, the more pleasure comes with the lodge room associations from the fact that, hand in hand with young manhood's fire, walks the sober judgment of experience.

The veteran Pythian is ever an object of regard and esteem in our midst; and whereas in St. Louis Lodge, No. 49, the oldest member is active and vigorous at three score and ten, and it is seemly for brother to crown these honored years with some token of remembrance, Sir Knight Wm. Goffe, of St. Louis, was taken by surprise on the evening of Jan. 1, 1890, by a company of eighteen couples, comprising most the able bodied K. of P.'s in St. Louis with their wives and ladies fair.

Sir Knight Goffe and his lady proved equal to the emergency, and made all feel that the art of happy entertainment was not lost nor forgotten.

After a delicious repast and an hour spent in music and dancing and other kindred amusements, the host was called out and, standing by his lady, was presented, by Sir Knight J. A. Weller, in behalf of St. Louis Lodge K. of P., with an elegant gold-headed cane appropriately engraved.

In presenting the token our veteran was assured that it was to show him that when through advancing years he should find the sword too heavy to wield, the cane would be still a reminder of his Pythian brethren and their regard for him.

After the little ceremony all present re-engaged in social amusement, and when carriages were announced for home the happy company broke never to forget the pleasant evening nor the kindly faces of Sir Knight Goffe and his estimable lady.

“PLUTO.”

GOLDEN WEDDING AT HORTON.

The 8th day of this month was the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Gifford of Horton, and a large number of relatives and friends from far and near congregated at the home of Edward Reynolds of Spring Arbor, to celebrate the event and extend kindly greeting and good cheer to the aged couple. Among the relatives present were W. R. Burt of Saginaw, and Mrs. Z. B. Goffe of St. Louis, brother and sister of Mrs. Gifford. Mrs. Gifford's maiden name was Melissa Burt. Was united in marriage to Horace Gifford Sept. 8, 1840, at Concord. Squire Magee tying the knot, and so firmly that it has never shown any signs of unraveling. Mr. Gifford came here from the State of New York in an early day, when very little improvement had been made in the way of clearing the land. He purchased eighty acres of land, and with his own hands cleared it of a heavy growth of timber, and is now the possessor of a good farm and comfortable home, where he and his loving helpmate have since lived in the enjoyment of the fruits thereof.

They have been for many years members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and firm believers and earnest workers in the cause. They will ever be remembered as true and good Christians and kind and obliging neighbors. They have but two children now living—the older, Teresa, the wife of Edward Reynolds, a successful farmer and active church member; the younger, Flora, the wife of Dr. W. A. Fallas of Coopersville. Mr. Gifford relates many interesting incidents of his pioneer life.

163. MILES C. BURT (son of Caleb,²² g⁴son of Asa,⁴³ g⁷g⁴son of James,²⁰ g⁷g⁷g⁴son of Henry,⁷ g⁷g⁷g⁷g⁴son of Jonathan,³ g⁷g⁷g⁷g⁷g⁴son of Henry¹), of New Britain, Conn.; born Sept. 6, 1803; died Oct. 14, 1865;
 married Nov. 28, 1826, Harriet M. Deming;

“Friend H. Burt died at his home in Mannington, W. Va., July 23d, in the 82d year of his age. Having served an apprenticeship in the New York Swamp, he built a tannery at New Boston, Mass., in 1840, which he run till 1845, when it was destroyed by fire, with all the stock. In 1849, in company with his brother, Orlo Burt, he migrated to what was then called the West, and built what in those days was called a large tannery at Beach Pond, Pa. After running this for two years, they sold it and bought another near Lanesboro’, Pa. This they operated for about three years. Friend H. Burt then built an extensive yard at Lanesboro’. This he sold to Wm. Tremain & Co., when he bought the tannery of J. S. Corbett, at Corbettsville, N. Y., and greatly enlarged it. Here his tannery was again destroyed by fire, together with his dwelling and everything in it. He immediately rebuilt, and during the war, while still at Corbettsville, he bought a yard located at Brookdale, Pa., in company with Henry C. Knight. In 1866, with his son, Frank, he went to Mannington, W. Va., where they purchased an oak leather tannery, and a partnership was formed under the style of F. H. Burt & Son. Two years after he went to Mannington his tannery was burned down. Few men have suffered the reverses that he did and still kept their heads above water. The panic of 1857, the fires, floods, and failures encountered, together with the seasons of losing markets, constitute a series of disasters seldom experienced in the life of one man. His indomitable energy, ability, and unflinching integrity were retained to the last, and his family are left in comfortable circumstances, proud of the honorable record of husband and father. Mr. Burt was raised a Democrat, but with the slavery agitation he became a Free Soiler and was elected to the Massachusetts Legislature as such. After moving to New York State, he was active in the organization of the Republican party, and in 1860 was elected to the New York Legislature. He was married to Maria Hodges at Great Barrington, Mass., in 1840, and she survives him. Their nine children, all grown to manhood and womanhood, are all living except Calvin, who was killed in the war. The older men of the New York Swamp will remember Friend Burt and take pleasure in testifying to his manliness and straightforward, honorable business career. [By New York Swamp is meant that portion of the city where the leather trade is chiefly carried on, and which was formally a marsh.—ED.] ”

Lieut. Albert Calvin Burt was born in the town of Sandisfield, Berkshire Co., Mass., Jan. 26, 1845. He enlisted Sept. 19, 1861, in his brother's company, in the 89th Regt., N. Y. S. Vol. Infantry. This regiment was known as the "Dickinson Guards," in honor of Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson, who received authority from the War Department to raise the regiment. He was mustered into the U. S. Service at Elmira, N. Y., Oct. 22, 1861, as a private. Was afterwards promoted to 2d Sergeant, thence to Orderly or 1st Sergeant, thence to 2d Lieutenant, and thence to 1st Lieutenant, and was in command of his company at the time he was killed. Was between sixteen and seventeen years of age when he enlisted—in stature a full grown man. He participated in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged, among which were the following: at Camden, N. C., Apr. 19, 1862, marching 52 miles in 24 hours, during which time the battle occurred, lasting 2 hours; South Mountain, Md., Sept. 14, 1862; Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; laying pontoons across the Rappahannock river at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 11, 1862 (in this action he was one of a hundred men, who crossed the river on pontoon boats and dislodged the rebel sharpshooters, capturing 127 of them, and then held the ground until the engineers finished the bridge); battle of Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862; Suffolk, Va., Apr. 19, 1863; capture of Fortification on Nansemond river, Va., May 3, 1863; and a great number of skirmishes and engagements, while under Gen. Grant in the year 1864, before Richmond and Petersburg, Va., and finally lost his life Oct. 27, 1864, in attempting to capture a fortification between the Seven Pines and Richmond City. This fortification was in the line of earthworks erected for the defense of Richmond, and was in sight of the spires of the city. When killed, he, with his regiment, was nearer to the city of Richmond than any Federal troops had been at that date. He was shot through the head and supposed to have died instantly. His body never was recovered, and his family were never able to get any tidings of him. The Federals were repulsed in this action and the rebels were in possession of the ground where he fell, before his comrades were able to bring him off the field. His regiment went from Elmira to Washington in December, 1861, and in January, 1862, joined the Burnside Expedition, and after a most tempestuous voyage landed at Hatteras, N. C., after riding on the waves for four weeks. Shortly after landing at Hatteras, the regiment was stationed on Roanoke Island, where they remained until July following, when they were sent up through the Dismal Swamp Canal to Norfolk, and afterwards to Fredericksburg. The rebels were now in Maryland in large force, and the regiment was sent to Washington, and marched thence to Middletown, Md., where the enemy was met at South Mountain, and three days afterwards at Antietam. After this battle the regiment went into camp at Pleasant Valley, Ind., and, about 1st December, moved down through Virginia to Fredericksburg. After the battle at this place, the 89th was stationed at Newport News, Va., and again at Norfolk, and thence at Suffolk, where he participated in two engagements. In the summer of 1863, the regiment was transferred to the Department of the South under Gen. Gillmore, and was stationed on Folly Island, S. C., until the beginning of Gen. Grant's campaign against Richmond and Petersburg in the spring of 1864. In this campaign, soldiering began in its most trying form. The men were almost continually under fire and in the trenches. It was at this time that Calvin was promoted to a 1st Lieutenant's commission. He was always well and ready for duty, never complained, and on account of his genial and jovial disposition was well-liked by all his comrades. At the battle of Fredericksburg, his regiment made a charge late at night on the earthworks on the hill back of the city. They were compelled to retreat with severe loss. Calvin carried a fellow sergeant, whose legs were shot away, off the field down to the hospital in this city. This was a brave and humane deed, exposing himself to the murderous fire of the enemy for some time after his regiment were ordered to and did retreat, in his efforts to bring the wounded sergeant off the field with him. When killed he was but 19 years of age.

On the scabbard of his sword was engraved "Capt. Frank Burt 89th N. Y. Vols." and on the butt of his Colt's Navy revolver was engraved "W. E. Bird." He wore both these at the time he was shot. Yet, his family have never been able to get any information in relation to him or of his weapons, although they have endeavored to do so.

Mr. Burt was born in Southampton, Mass. When Gov. Caleb Strong called for troops to defend Boston in the war of 1812, Franklin Burt responded with others from Southampton, and served three months, till his regiment was discharged, although, owing to physical infirmities, he was exempt from military duty. He purchased in 1828 a farm in Otisco, N. Y., and was among the early settlers of that town. He died while on a visit in Southampton. Mrs. Burt was also born in Southampton. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church in Otisco for forty years. Their son, Deloss Clark, went in 1859 to Illinois, and soon after the rebellion broke out enlisted at Sterling, Whiteside County, in Company A, 34th Illinois regiment, commanded by Col. Kirk. His regiment marched through Kentucky and Tennessee, and took a prominent part in the battle of Shiloh or Pittsburg Landing. Although in the thickest of the fight, acting part of the time as aid to Col. Kirk, who commanded a brigade, he escaped unhurt. Afterward, while his regiment was encamped at Battle Creek, he was taken sick with quinsy, and died and was buried at that place. Mr. and Mrs. Day removed in 1854 from Northampton, Mass., to Sullivan, Madison County, N. Y. Their children: George Newton, b. March 5, 1847, d. Jan. 10, 1865; Helen, b. June 23, 1860; Harriet, b. From Rev. Dr. Durfee's "Commemorative Discourse" in Great Barrington, 1866:

"The Rev. Sylvester Burt fitted for college at Westfield Academy, and was graduated at Williams College in 1804. As a scholar he occupied a standing among the first; his class was large, and contained a number of young men of talents and high attainments. At his graduation there was no valedictory oration pronounced, because the faculty could not unitedly decide whether it should be assigned to Burt, Waldo, or Woodbridge. After his graduation he passed a short time in teaching in Middletown, Conn., and then commenced the study of theology with the Rev. Dr. Lothrop of West Springfield, and was licensed to preach the gospel by the Hampshire Association in Oct., 1805. He was three times settled in the ministry; over the church in Western, now Warren, from March 11, 1806, to Dec. 31, 1811; at New Marlborough South from April 21, 1813, to Dec. 22, 1822; and at Great Barrington from Feb. 12, 1823, until his death. 'In the fall of 1822 Mr. Burt, in taking his turn with other members of the Berkshire Association, preached one Sabbath in this place to supply the pulpit during the illness of Rev. Mr. Wheeler. It was reported that he had just received an invitation to go to New Orleans, and had concluded to accept it. This report led to an immediate and successful effort to secure his settlement in Great Barrington.'

"Mr. Burt was an instructive preacher. His preparations for the sanctuary were ordinarily made with great rapidity; and, in addition to his two sermons on the Sabbath, he frequently taught a Bible class, and attended a Sabbath evening meeting, at which he usually delivered a lecture. Besides the labors of the Sabbath, it was not unusual for him, especially in times of religious interest, to deliver two or three evening lectures in the course of the week. He had a happy talent at conducting social meetings, and his addresses to professors of religion, his words of counsel to the young convert, and his exhortations to the unawakened were earnest, feeling, and impressive. The consequence was his services were often sought by his brethren in seasons of revival. He was a ready man. His style of writing and speaking were both easy and natural. He was affectionate and spiritual, often searching and solemn. On sudden occasions his address and prayers were generally appropriate, sometimes moving and melting. He was a successful preacher. Revivals were the joyful experiences of his ministry. He admitted one hundred and ninety-six individuals to his church—an average of fifteen annually. He was a man of ardent temperament. His piety was of a high order. He was a warm friend, and took great delight in social intercourse. He always received his brethren in the ministry, as well as private Christians, with a hospitable welcome. 'He was a sagacious reasoner, and remarkable for keenness of wit, and appropriateness of repartee,' which often showed itself in his intercourse with friends; but nothing of it ever appeared in the pulpit. His reverence for the sanctuary and for the themes which here engage the attention opened other fountains of emotion, and placed him among the most serious and solemn preachers. It is interesting and pleasant to remember and contemplate his many and acknowledged excellences as a man, a scholar, a friend, and a minister. He died suddenly on the Sabbath, the very day he was expecting to preach from the text: 'I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day. The night cometh in which no man can work.' On the Thursday following, at his funeral, an appropriate discourse was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Bradford of Sheffield from the 1st Thessalonians, iv, 13-18."

Dea. Oliver P. Burt was born and married at Southampton, Mass. His children were all born there. Mrs. Burt was from Westhampton, Mass. He removed, with his family, in the fall of 1831, to the far west, as Western New York was then called; but not until after the minister, on the previous Sunday, had requested the prayers of the church and congregation that "the Lord would protect, prosper, and carry them safely through." They rode to Albany in wagons; from thence to Syracuse by canal-boat. After spending four weeks among family friends at Otisco, Onondaga County, N. Y., they continued their journey in wagons to Napoli, where relatives of Mrs. Burt were settled. Here Mr. Burt purchased land in the dense forest; and, after making a clearing, built a log house, hewing the logs on the inside, thus obtaining the most luxurious house in Napoli, in which family worship, and a blessing before, and thanks returned after each meal were never omitted. He was soon chosen deacon of the church, and continued in the office as long as he lived. In 1844 he made over his farm to his oldest son, and, with his wife, youngest son, and two unmarried daughters, revisited Southampton, Mass., where he remained in the family of his son-in-law, Samuel Lyman, until 1850, when he returned to Napoli to spend the remainder of his days.

Samuel and Lucetta Lyman of Southampton, Mass., had

From the discourse delivered by Rev. Chas. B. McLean at the funeral of Rev. Mr. Burt:

“Our friend and brother, whose death we mourn to-day, lives on. All that drew our hearts to him, all the excellences of his character, all the noble qualities of his mind and heart are with him still, and are a possession that will never be taken away.

“Let us, then, notice briefly some of these abiding results of life to him; these ever-living features of his character. I have time only for a few of the more prominent.

“One of these was a strong and earnest love of right. He loved it for itself, for its own sake, and because he saw and felt its excellence and its sacredness. His perception was not darkened by any consideration of self-interest. With this feeling, it was natural, too, that he should carry out his convictions without reserve. When his decision was once made he was inflexible. His conscience was his unvarying law. He sympathized most warmly with the contest for right that is waging in the world; he felt that it was his own, and rejoiced in every evidence of its success. He could not bear injustice, whatever form it took, and he was not ashamed to avow his opposition to it, and to pray for its defeat. Few men are to be found possessed of that uncompromising love of right, that abhorrence of every wrong, that unshrinking devotion to duty. Closely connected with this, and growing out of it, was another feature which I will barely name, and that is a sincerity, an honesty of soul. There was no disguise, no concealment in him; he had no sinister ends to accomplish—none that could not be accomplished by fair and open means. His open countenance was an index of his mind and heart. Another prominent feature in his character was a large humanity—not a mere sentiment, but a love for man that became a steady principle of his life. He entered with all his heart into every measure of reform. The language of prayer was natural to him: there was a simplicity and a peculiar appropriateness that made you feel that he understood your wants and knew how to carry them to God. While he held his own views firmly, he was kind and liberal towards those who honestly differed from him. While he was decided and earnest, he was at the same time a man of tender sensibilities, gentle, and affectionate. He was a warm friend of revivals, and frequently rejoiced in the presence of the spirit of God among his people. Endowed with a mind fitted to lead rather than to follow, and possessing great capacity for influencing others, it was important that these powers should be early directed aright. Not without sorrow could such a mind be brought to bow to the divine will, and so he was early visited with severe domestic afflictions. The same discipline followed him through life. Very fresh in your memory are the sorrows of later years. It seems but yesterday that where the father now lies the only son was laid cold in death. How many hopes were buried in the grave of that son! and very many of you can testify how uncomplainingly all these fond hopes were resigned. With the closing scenes of his life you are all familiar; how suddenly and violently disease fastened upon him, and how quickly he who had been your pastor for more than thirty years passed away. He anticipated from the first that his time had come, and to one who called and prayed with him he said: 'Brother, I have no fears.' He would occasionally say a few words of comfort to his sorrowing wife, expressing the perfect quietness and peace of his own mind. And so he, who so many times has been through your streets, and over these hills, and along these valleys, is gone. One Sabbath in the sacred desk; the next, O where? We look upwards and say: 'Yonder, with the spirits of the just made perfect in the paradise of God.'"

General David Burt was born in Northampton, Mass. He became one of the early residents of Buffalo, N. Y., where he was a successful merchant for over thirty years. In 1831, he built the beautiful homestead on Court street, where his family lived until 1853 (now the site of the Buffalo High School). He married in Utica, N. Y., Harriet R. Whiting, who was born in Danbury, Conn. (A descendant of Lieut. Frederick I. Whiting, U. S. A.) The Buffalo Express of August 10, 1848, contains the following tribute:

"Died, yesterday afternoon at his residence, General David Burt, aged 58 years.

"General Burt was a native of Northampton, Mass., and came to this place in 1815. Few of our citizens were more extensively known in this vicinity. Possessed of strong natural sense and great energy, he was one of our most active and enterprising citizens. Three times, we believe, he represented this county in the legislature, and for a great many years has held, and efficiently exercised the responsible and sometimes arduous duties of a General of the State militia. Although for several years his health has been infirm, yet his death will be felt as a serious loss, not only by his family but by a large circle of acquaintances and friends."

Mrs. Burt died at Buffalo.

Maria Whiting Burt married Edward Douglass Reed of Montpelier, Vt. He died at Buffalo, April 5, 1889. In 1878, he was elected by the citizens of Placer County to represent them in the State Constitutional Convention held at Sacramento, during the winter of 1878-9. In the fall of 1879 he was elected to represent the county in the State Senate, serving two years, and assisting largely in putting the machinery of the new constitution into working order. As public life always was distasteful to him, he declined to accept any further political favors, though strongly urged by the citizens to continue to serve them in any capacity he would accept. On retiring from the Senate in 1881, he engaged in the mercantile business at Auburn, and has devoted his entire time and attention to the business, and to-day has the credit (justly earned) of doing the largest business of any house in the county.

Mr. Burt moved from Warwick, N. Y., to Coshocton, Ohio, in October, 1832, and moved from Coshocton, and settled near Flint, Franklin Co., Ohio, in April, 1865. He was a farmer. Mrs. Burt is descended from Roger Williams. Hiram N. Taylor was born Sept. 20, 1838; is an engineer. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor reside at Coshocton, and have had three children, two living (1877).

Richard Marian Voorhees, youngest son of Jacob and Elizabeth Gaskill Voorhees, was born Oct. 6, 1838, at New Market (now Scio), Harrison County, Ohio. After the completion of study, he read law and was admitted to the bar of Ohio, July 6, 1860, locating for the practice of his profession at Coshocton, O., in the same year, and where he is still (1891) actively engaged in the practice of the law. He was the first man to volunteer from Coshocton County in the three-months service in the war of 1861. He served with his company, Co. A, 16th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the term of enlistment in the campaign of West Virginia. After expiration of his term of enlistment, he re-enlisted as a private soldier in Co. F, 65th O. V. I., on the 28th of October, 1861. Promoted to 1st Lieutenant of the company, Nov. 6, 1861, and Captain of the same company, Nov. 31, 1861. He and his company and regiment participated in the battles of Shiloh or Pittsburgh Landing, Siege of Corinth, Perryville, and Stone River. Was wounded in the latter engagement. Being disabled from active service by reason of his wound, he was transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps, and commissioned by the President of the United States a Captain in the said Corps, which position he held until November 18, 1865, when he resigned and returned to his home at Coshocton. Captain Voorhees was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Coshocton County, Ohio, in the fall of 1868, and re-elected for second term in 1872. Admitted to practice in United States District and Circuit Courts of Ohio, at Cleveland, in 1875.

At the battle of Stone River, Tenn., on the 31st day of December, 1862, her husband being severely wounded, Mrs. Voorhees, although but nineteen years of age, set off at once for the battlefield, which she reached in a few days after the close of the battle, and before the killed were buried. She was exposed to many hardships and dangers while passing through Kentucky and Tennessee, on her way to the battlefield. The rebel General Morgan, a few days prior to her going, had destroyed the railroad between Louisville and Nashville, and all along the route there were bands of guerrillas marauding the country for plunder. She reached the battlefield in safety, and found her husband on the field. She remained with him there until he was able to be removed to his home at Coshocton, Ohio.

Being restored to health, he returned to the service in the spring of 1863. In the summer of that year, she joined her husband at Louisville, Ky., where he was doing post duty, and remained with him until he left the service at the close of the war, in 1865. They have three children, viz.: Campbell Marion, born Dec. 23, 1866; Burt Fisk, born April 18, 1869; Georgianna, born December 28, 1876.

Harvey W. Johnson was born Sept. 12, 1842; is a merchant. They have (1877) two children, residence, Flint, Franklin Co., Ohio. Henry C. Johnson was born Sept. 2, 1842; is a farmer: residence, Flint, Ohio. Jesse N. Thompson was born Sept. 20, 1851; residence, Flint, Ohio.

Thomas Burt was born in Bellvale, N. Y., and, with the exception of five years spent in Albany, N. Y., and Central Ohio, lived there until 1868, when he moved to Warwick, N. Y., where he has since resided (1890).

He was educated in the public schools, excepting one year at the Classical Academy at Albany, N. Y. He has been a farmer from early manhood, and for over thirty years was engaged, first, in the manufacture of lumber, and later, in the sale of lumber and coal. He has held many positions of trust and responsibility, as executor, administrator, and trustee, for estates, etc. Since his residence in his adopted village, he has been for nine years secretary and treasurer of the Cemetery Association, was for fourteen years a member of the Board of Education, was chairman of the Board of Water Commissioners at the time the water-works were built, and for the last fifteen years has been secretary and treasurer of the Warwick Savings Bank, which he organized in 1875, and of which he has had the general management to the present time. In politics he acted with the Free-soil and Republican parties until 1872; since then with those favoring civil-service and revenue-reform.

Mr. Thomas Burt has an old deed with Seaborn Burt's signature, dated March 12, 1749/50, deeding land to his brother Daniel.

Mrs. Burt is the daughter of Benjamin Sayer.

Rev. V. B. Carroll was born Jan. 11, 1846; residence, Tenally, N. J.

Mrs. Jane Stephenson Burt was daughter of Isaac Van Duzer.

Mr. and Mrs. Kate Van Duzer Caldwell reside at Newburgh, N. Y.; he was born March 31, 1840.

Mr. and Mrs. Halstead reside at Brooklyn, N. Y.; he was born July 31, 1845.

From Railroad Topics of July, 1890:

"Grinnell Burt was born in the village of Bellvale, Orange County, N. Y., in November, 1822, and is a descendant of James Burt, one of the most prominent of the early legislators of the state. At the age of fifteen, his father and mother both being dead, he emigrated to Ohio, where he remained for several years, returning in 1841 to his native town. With a natural aptitude for mechanical construction, and a mind that quickly grasped all opportunities for developing the resources of the country, he became interested in railroad projects, a field for which he was peculiarly fitted. Meanwhile, his love for the law prompted a course of reading and study, which, as subsequent events proved, was of great value in enabling him while at the head of various corporate interests to avoid many vexatious litigations. In fact, he developed so fully the necessary qualifications of a successful advocate, that his friends in the legal fraternity urged him to make the practice of law his profession. The law and all other projects he abandoned, however, to follow his strongest inclination to engage in the organization and management of railroads.

"With others, he organized, in 1859, the Warwick Valley Railroad, and was its president and superintendent until 1878; he was president of the Wawayanda Railroad from 1879 to 1882; president of the Pequest & Wallkill Railroad from 1876 to 1882; when all the above corporations being consolidated under the title of the Lehigh & Hudson River Railway, he was made president and general manager, and has since been retained at the head of this corporation.

"During the time that Grinnell Burt has been gradually developing—seemingly against difficulties impossible to overcome—this through line from the Pennsylvania coal fields to New England, he has taken an active hand in the management of other important railroads. With Judge H. R. Low of Orange County, Gen. James H. Negley of Pittsburgh, and others, he projected and built in 1878-79 forty miles of the Pittsburgh & Western Railroad, during which time he was superintendent of construction and operation.

"From 1875 to 1883, he was president of the Middletown, Unionville & Water Gap Railroad, which was brought out of financial chaos and put on a sound footing under his sagacious management. In 1883-85, he was president of the Cincinnati, Van Wert & Michigan (now known as the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw). Under his administration this road was extended about one hundred miles.

"He was one of the reorganization committee of the Toledo & Ohio Central, which is generally conceded to have been one of the most successful reorganizations of a bankrupt company ever effected. Mr. Burt was a director of this company for three years after. He was also one of the committee to reorganize the New Jersey Midland, now the New York, Susquehanna & Western. He was for several years a director and subsequently president of the Kanawha & Ohio Railroad, serving until the reorganization in March, 1890.

"In 1875, he was appointed by Governor Samuel J. Tilden one of the three commissioners to remove obstructions from the Delaware River, for which an appropriation had been made.

During the discharge of this duty, as a result of his practical methods, Mr. Burt and Governor Tilden became fast friends. The commission served without pay, and after their work was thoroughly done a balance remained in their hands, which was deposited in the state treasury — a result so unusual in the expenditure of public money that it excited no little comment.

“Two years later, at the solicitation of Gov. Tilden, who was heavily interested, Mr. Burt assumed the management of the New York & Greenwood Lake Railroad, it being the purpose of Mr. Tilden and other capitalists concerned to extend this line to Albany via the Wallkill Valley. The project, however, miscarried, and the road was sold to the New York, Lake Erie & Western.

“Mr. Burt has been identified with various projects for bridging the Hudson, notably the Storm King, Poughkeepsie, and Peekskill bridges, and since the completion of the Poughkeepsie Bridge, the Lehigh & Hudson River Railway has been connected with the bridge lines by the Orange County Railroad, which is operated by the Lehigh & Hudson.

“Since 1874, Mr. Burt has been a trustee of the Middletown State Homeopathic Hospital, serving on the building committee, and is now president of the institution — one of the most successful of its kind in the world. So closely has his name been associated with the growth of his native town, that a sketch of his life necessarily comprises a history of the village of Warwick for the past thirty-five years. He was one of the founders of the first National Bank, and is now its vice-president; an agitator in favor of incorporating the village under a special charter, and active in building the reservoir and water-works. In educational matters he has always taken a great interest; was one of the incorporators of the Warwick institute, and for thirty-two consecutive years a member of the Board of Education.

“Possessed of a robust physique, a strong will, an independent nature and an aggressive spirit, Grinnell Burt has achieved success where men of more pliant mould would have failed. In politics, as in railroad affairs, he has never allowed tempting aspirations or suggestions to alter the course prompted by his own convictions. His rugged honesty of purpose has never been questioned, even when most bitterly assailed by those whose opinions or interests he opposed. Mr. Burt has been a close observer of men and affairs, and his opinions as a rule are based upon a keen analysis of merit. He has never been a follower, but is always original in thought and action.

"As a public speaker he has a remarkable faculty for direct and pointed argument, while his ready wit and oftentimes brilliant sallies make him a favorite with all classes. Many of his telling epigrams and witticisms are by-words among his fellow townsmen, which is perhaps as great a compliment as one could ask.

"Socially he is one of the most interesting of men. With a mind stored with the gleanings of a busy life, his conversation teems with reminiscences of the past, particularly of prominent men and measures, while his fund of anecdote is inexhaustible. No one loves a good story better or can tell one with greater zest than he.

"He has always been a favorite among the employés of the roads that he managed, and his fairness and impartiality is perhaps the reason that no strike has ever occurred on any of the lines which he has operated. Another quite remarkable fact is that no passenger ever lost his life on any road of which he was manager.

"In 1850, Mr. Burt married Miss Jane S. Van Duzer, daughter of Isaac Van Duzer, of Warwick, a woman of charming presence, intelligence, and refinement. Their married life was a happy one. Mrs. Burt died in 1871, leaving four daughters, two of whom are married. In 1886, he married Miss Louise Pierson, daughter of Samuel V. Pierson, of Middletown, N. Y., a lady of rare personal worth, and a great favorite with a wide circle of friends, possessing all those womanly qualities that win the esteem of those with whom she becomes associated. This union has added to the family circle two sons. Mr. Burt passes his leisure hours at home with his interesting family and in his well-stocked library. Besides other matters that engage his attention, he is especially interested in the study of geological and mineralogical subjects, having made a fine collection of minerals which now adorn the shelves of his cabinet."

Lieut.-Col. Burt enlisted in April, 1861, as a private in the 9th New York City Regiment, when a little over nineteen years of age. This regiment was ordered to Washington, where it volunteered for three years, or during the war; was ordered to proceed to Harper's Ferry or its vicinity, where it formed part of the army commanded by Gen. Patterson, and afterwards by Gen. Banks. In September of that year he received a furlough from the last-mentioned officer, for the purpose of endeavoring to raise a company of volunteers. In this he was successful, and his company was attached to the 91st Regiment of New York Volunteers, which, in December, 1861, was ordered to Key West, and afterward to Pensacola, Fla. While stationed there he was promoted to the rank of major of the 159th Regiment of New York Volunteers, being then at New Orleans, which regiment he soon after joined. After Gen. Banks assumed the command of the army in that city, it made a movement westward to the interior of Louisiana. At a place called Irish Bend a battle was fought with the rebels, who were defeated. He (Major Burt) was then acting on the staff of Gen. Grover, who ordered him to take a company of cavalry and charge the enemy, and endeavor to gain possession of a bridge occupied by them. This was successfully accomplished. In that battle his regiment suffered severely. The colonel (Molineaux) was badly wounded; the lieutenant-colonel (Draper) and the adjutant (Lathrop) were killed; and about one hundred others of the regiment were either killed or wounded. The fall of the lieutenant-colonel and the absence of the colonel rendered it necessary for him to leave his position on Gen. Grover's staff and take command of the regiment. The army was then led back to and across the Mississippi River, where it invested the enemy's strong works at Port Hudson, which were twice assaulted by order of Gen. Banks, but without success, though the rebels soon afterwards, upon the fall of Vicksburg, surrendered to the Union army. At the first assault of Port Hudson Major Burt led his regiment, also a Connecticut regiment, whose principal officers were absent, up to the ramparts (or foot of the embankments of the rebel works), where the regimental standard of the 159th New York Volunteers was planted. The assault was unsuccessful, and the Union troops were ordered to fall back. The color sergeant of the 159th being either killed or wounded, the standard was left behind, which, being observed by Major Burt (who was acting on foot), he ran back amidst a shower of balls and recovered it, and safely rejoined his command. On this occasion about one hundred of the regiment fell, either killed or wounded, within the space of a very few minutes after it emerged from the cover of a ravine. At the second assault he also led his regiment. It proved a failure, and this and other regiments retreated to cover in a hollow near at hand, where they were compelled to remain in the sunshine of a hot June day from ten o'clock A. M. until after dark, that they might escape the grape and cannister of the enemy on their farther retreat. On this occasion he received a sunstroke, and was compelled to retire from the army a short time, and from the effects of which he has scarcely yet fully recovered (1873?). He took the field subsequently, but after a few months found he could not endure fatigue in the hot sun. This led to his resignation about a year before the close of the war, having attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel at about the age of twenty-two years. After the affair of Port Hudson, Gen. Banks tendered him the commission of colonel, to command a regiment of colored troops, but this offer he declined.

Mrs. Burt is the daughter of John and Julia (Henry) Coventry, both natives of Columbia County, N. Y., but residents for many years at Newark, Wayne County, in the same State.

Mr. Burt studied with his father in Ithaca, N. Y.; entered college, 1846; graduated at Harvard, 1850; law school, Harvard College, LL.B., 1853. He then commenced practice in Boston; remained till the opening of the war, being a commissioner under the Personal Liberty Bill. An active abolitionist, he was counsel for the defendant in the Burns rescue cases. When John A. Andrew was chosen governor, and the war broke out, he gave up his law office, and was appointed Judge Advocate of the State of Massachusetts on the Governor's staff, first with the rank of Major, then with the rank of Brigadier-General. He was sent out with the various expeditions of our troops, and was in every State of the Confederacy during the war; was sent by the President to Texas with Governor Hamilton; was in the various battles in the Gulf by land and water. At the close of the war he went out of office, and went into business with Gov. Andrew in Boston, and was appointed postmaster, March, 1867. He was disbursing agent for the U. S. in Boston, and purchased the land, and disbursed all moneys for the construction of the New Post-Office and Sub-Treasury Building, and remained postmaster till Jan. 1, 1876, when he resigned. He was, at one time, president of the Utica, Ithaca & Elmira Railroad, with his office in Boston, Mass. His position, during the war and since, brought him into constant and the most intimate relations with the public men of our country. Both of General Burt's wives were daughters of Dea. Robert and Lydia Vinal of Somerville, Mass.

OBITUARY. — WILLIAM L. BURT.

“General William L. Burt, President of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western Railroad Company, died at 1.30 A. M., yesterday, at his residence in Saratoga Springs, of paralysis, after an illness of nearly two weeks. He was about 55 years of age and a native of Wilbraham, Mass., where his earlier education was received. While young he removed with his father to Ithaca, N. Y., but soon after arriving at his majority he returned to Massachusetts, and entered Harvard Law School, being graduated in 1854. He entered the office of Gov. John A. Andrew as a law student, and, on his admission to the bar, entered into partnership. On the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion Gov. Andrew appointed him Judge-Advocate-General on his staff, intrusting him with very many important and delicate commissions in connection with the State forces, with the colored quota, and the enlistment and pay of troops. Previous to this he was instrumental in organizing the Suffolk-Street Railway, connecting by ferry with East Boston, and was active in its management until it was merged into the metropolitan corporation. He also rendered efficient services in ridding the public of the Count Johannes suits for libel, which were frequently being brought, and it was chiefly through his efforts that the ‘Count’ was expelled from the Suffolk Bar.

"In 1867 Governor Andrew, without the knowledge of Gen. Burt, suggested the name of the latter to President Johnson for the postmastership of Boston, and though Gen. Burt was known to be politically opposed to the President, yet out of respect to Gov. Andrew, President Johnson appointed him. Gen. Burt worked energetically to secure for Boston a suitable post-office, and finally succeeded, notwithstanding much opposition from interested real estate owners and others. This opposition bore fruit later in the attempted removal of Gen. Burt when ex-Gov. Jewell was Postmaster-General. Gen. Burt was the first to give women salaried positions in his office. When the new post-office was practically secured he resigned the position and engaged at once in railroad business. He was largely interested in the Union Pacific Railroad through his intimacy with Oakes Ames, to whom he was related. Since then he has given almost undivided attention to railroad matters. The construction of the road of which he was president at the time of his death, which extended from North Adams to Mechanicsville, and which gave a double-tracked line of railway to Boston from that city to the lakes, was mainly due to his untiring labors. Gen. Burt was interested in many railroad schemes with the late Ezra Cornell. The Ithaca & Cortland and the Utica, Ithaca & Elmira Railroads were enterprises pushed to success by Gen. Burt's exertions. Gen. Burt had been twice married. He leaves a widow, the sister of his first wife, and a large family of children."

Mrs. Burt was the daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Bancroft) Lawton of near Sheffield, England. Mr. James Burt settled in Cattaraugus in Nov., 1832, before he was admitted to degree of counsel in his profession. When he attained to that degree, he was appointed to the office of District Attorney by the judges of the Court of Common Pleas, and served in that office for about seven years. In 1844 he was elected from the County of Cattaraugus a Representative in the Legislature, and served as such one year. In 1846 he removed from the State; and, after spending a period of three years in Cincinnati, he finally located again at Dubuque, Iowa, in 1849. In 1862 he was elected Judge of the District Court, and served in that capacity from Jan. 1, 1863, for two terms, amounting to eight years. He served as a member of the City Council, as a representative from Third Ward during years 1852 and 1853, and as Mayor one year, from April, 1871, to same date, 1872. (February, 1873.)

FROM MEMORIAL DISCOURSE DELIVERED BY REV. C. O.
BROWN, DUBUQUE, IOWA, SEPTEMBER 12, 1886.

Mark the perfect man and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace.—Ps. xxxvii:37.

We are met to commemorate the life and character of the Hon. James Burt, our friend and brother, who has recently gone away from us into the unseen country which lies beyond. His prominence in this community during nearly forty years would require that we should mark the close of his career by some suitable review; his purity and uprightness as a man, his uniform and noble bearing as a courteous gentleman in the truest sense, and above all his unwavering fidelity as a Christian, render it a delight so to do. To the legal fraternity, who were his associates previous to and during the eight years when he occupied the bench, and to the community at large he was known, and will always be remembered as "Judge Burt." But to the members of this church, among whom he moved with the wisdom of a counselor, the sweet familiarity of a friend and the affection of a father in Israel, he will always be spoken of as "Deacon Burt."

His mother belonged to one of the old Mohawk Dutch families and traced her ancestry to long honored names in the Netherlands. Amid the charming scenery of the Mohawk Valley, and the society of that quaint old city, he grew to young manhood. At this happy period of his life he enjoyed the benefits of a delightful home. His parents were deeply religious. He kept with great care, to the end of his days, a large Holland Bible, bearing imprint 1744, which was his mother's peculiar treasure, and from which, in her company, he used to read daily when a child. The Bible had belonged to his grandmother before it came into his mother's possession. His parents were in good circumstances, able to provide for their child all that he needed for his comfort and education. It was a home in which stories of the heroic days when the Netherlands arose against the persecutions of Philip II, and drove his armies victoriously from the soil, mingled with stories of the heroic days which marked the struggle for liberty in Old England and New England. Blended with the still fresh tales of our own revolutionary struggle, many of whose heroes were then living, were stories of the heroism of William,

Prince of Orange, and of the remorseless butcheries of the Duke of Alva. In the veins of our brother the blood of two liberty-loving peoples met, and into his childhood entered the powerful influence and inspiration which came from familiarity with and pride in two mighty struggles for civil and religious liberty.

From a child his habits and manner were those of a student. He was a lover of thought and of books. Happily, his parents were most fortunately situated to gratify all of his desires for study.

Years previous to this time his grandfather on his mother's side had owned the ground on which Union College now stands, and in deeding it to the College authorities, made a provision for the education of children and children's children. Mr. Burt was the only one who ever enjoyed the full benefits of this foresight. He needed no urging. At the unusual age of fifteen he was prepared for college and entered the Freshman class at Union, in the days when its famous president, Dr. Nott, was in his prime. This was in 1824. Without hindrance he pursued his studies through the regular classical course, and graduated with foremost honors when he was nineteen years old. As a rule, I think it is true that those who complete their studies so young have only a superficial knowledge of what they have gone over. But such was not the case with this youthful graduate of Union College. He knew what he had learned, thoroughly. His mind grasped the themes which it had canvassed and held them tenaciously to the end of his life.

A portrait of Mr. Burt as he appeared about the time of his graduation shows him in the fresh blush of his young manhood, tall, straight as an arrow, high forehead, light brown hair, blue eyes, open frank countenance, with an expression of fearless rectitude which needs no artifice and seeks no disguise. It shows that the leading traits of his character were already well developed and stamped in the expression of his features.

After his graduation from college he went to Hudson, where for several years he studied law in the office of the leading lawyer of the place. His study of law was characterized by the same thoroughness with which he had pursued the classics. He went to the bottom of things. He laid away in his retentive memory those principles of law and rulings of courts whose possession made of him one of the most learned lawyers that ever honored the Iowa bar.

Shortly after his marriage the young couple joined the common tide of emigration, and removed to, what then seemed to them the far West, Franklinville, Cattaraugus County, in the southwestern part of their own State! And indeed in that early day, more than half a century ago, Franklinville had all of the characteristics of an American frontier town. Indians from a reservation near Buffalo used to visit the place in large numbers, and all the country about was in a new and wild condition. In Franklinville all of his children, four daughters and one son, were born.

Mr. Burt's career in Franklinville was what might have been expected from one of his attainments. He soon became one of the leading lawyers of the place, and his reputation as a lawyer and as a man of honor spread throughout that part of the State. Men had confidence in him. For seven years he was the prosecuting attorney of Franklinville. He was also elected to represent Cattaraugus County in the lower house of the New York legislature. In the legislative "Manual" of New York for the year 1844 his name occurs in connection with that of Marcus H. Johnson as representative of his county.

This was a period in Mr. Burt's life when he cherished political ambitions; and they were not without reason. For seven years he had been widely known as District Attorney. He had served one term in the legislature of the Empire State, and was known throughout Western New York as one of the ablest and most eloquent of stump speakers. He was regarded by all as one of the brightest young men of the State, for whom there was a political future of great possibilities. Nor is there much doubt that these anticipations might have been met had he seen fit to remain among the friends where his reputation as a young politician was already made, and where the people were ready to recognize his abilities. But in the midst of these anticipations he thought best to remove to another part of the country. It is said that the older people of Western New York still talk of "Squire Burt," retaining the memory of his speeches. It was during those early days of his public life that Mr. Burt was acquainted and in various ways associated with Mr. Seward.

In 1845, in the midst of a growing and prosperous practice, he suddenly determined to break up and go further west. He removed at once to the city of Cincinnati, where he resided three years. He had just acquired a fair practice and made acquaintances which promised to be helps to prominence and wide success, when the cholera visited that city and at once became epidemic. He broke up immediately, his family returning to the old home in New York State, while he went westward to St. Louis. When he arrived there he did not know which way he should go, nor where he should locate. Sudden disaster had scattered his plans, but had not broken his spirits.

While in St. Louis, and in a way which most men would call "the merest chance," he overheard a conversation about Dubuque, made inquiries, and at once took the steamer from St. Louis to this place. His mind was made up that this was the place for which he had been looking, and here he established himself in the practice of his profession. This was in 1848, thirty-eight years ago.

Soon after arriving here Mr. Burt entered into partnership with Hon. Stephen Hempstead, who was the second Governor of the State, elected in 1850 during his association with Mr. Burt. For years thereafter no law firm of Northern Iowa was better known than that of Hempstead & Burt. The association of these men in business appeared to those who knew them peculiarly appropriate. They were both gentlemen of the highest order, urbane, scholarly, affable; and they imparted to their firm a character and reputation for these high qualities.

On March 8, 1857, Mr. Burt joined the Congregational Church, at whose services he had been an attendant since coming to the city in 1848. Mr. Burt was elected one of the Deacons in the same year, which position he held to the time of his death.

For years prior to uniting with this church he had been a prominent member of the society. In 1856, as also in 1857 and 1860, he was chairman of the Board of Trustees. During his chairmanship there were twenty-five business meetings. He was present at every one but the last.

In February, 1856, it was on his motion resolved that the new church, then in prospect (the one in which we are now gathered), should not cost to exceed $25,000. Others subsequently departed from that resolution, but all saw the time when, with an overwhelming and nearly fatal debt, they wished that Mr. Burt's resolution had been adhered to. He was chairman of the committee which audited the accounts of the building committee. In 1865 the society tendered him a vote of thanks for money given and services rendered in helping the church out of debt.

After the dissolution of the partnership of Hempstead & Burt, Mr. Burt was for several years associated in business with Mr. Barnard, and subsequently with Mr. William Angel under the firm name of Burt & Angel; and in 1860 Mr. D. E. Lyon was admitted to the firm, which was known from that time as Burt, Angel & Lyon.

He was several times, more by the will of his friends than his own, prominently before the people of this city and district; and each time that he consented to be a candidate he was elected.

In 1853 he was chosen as alderman. He was greatly interested in the public schools of the city, and was several terms a member of the school board. In 1863 he was elected to the bench of this district. The contest was spirited and close. Many were greatly excited over it. But Mr. Burt maintained his usual composure and almost indifference with reference to the result. Of all who took any prominent interest in the legal or political affairs of this district he was perhaps the least excited. He remained on the bench eight years. He left it finally of his own will, refusing further nomination.

In 1871 he was elected Mayor of the city on the Republican ticket, and served with great acceptance.

For a time after this Mr. Burt kept an office and maintained the practice of law, but not long. He spent several years subsequently with relatives in a neighboring community and in the East. Returning here, he has passed his time since in retirement, he and his wife making their home with their daughter, Mrs. Keller, enjoying the society of numerous friends whom they had known for more than a generation, and finding for their closing years that peaceful and gentle eventide which such virtue as theirs deserved.

Among the older members of the bar some are still living who were here when Judge Burt came first to Dubuque. They remember him as a man in the full tide and vigor of his powers. He was then thirty-nine years old, a man of fine presence, tall, and of spare frame, straight, alert; broad and high forehead, with eyes of grayish blue, which could flash on occasions, but which seemed better fitted to beam in kindly recognition. All of the lines of his face indicated a man of thought and of inflexible principle, blended with great gentleness, affability, and consideration for the feelings of others. He impressed you as one who could be a martyr for principle if need required it; but who would much more naturally fill the role of a philanthropist, with deeds and thoughts of love for his fellow men.

In seeking to form some estimate of Judge Burt's ability and standing as a lawyer, I have conversed with and consulted the opinions of many persons who knew him well—among them a number of the lawyers of this city. There is but one opinion concerning his knowledge of the law and his ability to state instantly, concisely, and clearly what he knew. My own opinion would be worthless. I am happy to be able to give that of several honored members of the Dubuque Bar. "He was an excellent advocate, a profound lawyer, well versed in the principles of the common law, and that knowledge stood by him all his life." In his profound mastery of the common law no man in northern Iowa surpassed him, and it may well be doubted whether there was his equal. All agreed in this opinion, and the words in which various parties have stated it without the slightest collusion, are remarkably similar. His manner in addressing a jury was a combination of grace, courtesy, and dignity. He stood erect, rarely indulging in strange or exaggerated postures, using gestures but sparingly, sometimes looking out of the window, as he talked, running on in an easy flow of speech, which covered the minor points of his address; but as his argument drew to a climax, as if returning to himself and his jury, he eyed every man in turn, and gathered in the results of all that he had been saying, with remarkable and convincing force. His style of speech, like the man himself, was cast in a classical mold. His sentences thrown off at the moment, were oftentimes remarkable for their beauty and rhetorical balance, so that one hearing him for the first time would think involuntarily, as many said, "This is no ordinary speech." His manner was graceful rather than ardent; courteous and classical rather than forceful; persuasive and convincing rather than overwhelming. He sought to win the convictions rather than to arouse the emotions.

One says: "Judge Burt was always for the right as he saw it. He was a learned lawyer—few in his day were his equal in learning. He was a bad Judge to appeal from. His profound knowledge of the law made his rulings almost infallible. As an attorney his bearing toward opposing counsel was always that of a gentleman—always affable, always courteous. He knew the precise value of language. In speech he was, at times, in his later years, inclined to be too verbose; but his written documents were always exact. I had occasion to consult his papers at various times. In a written opinion or charge from him, every word was in place and every word meant something precise and definite. He came to the bench as a trial lawyer of long experience. On that account he saw instantly the bearings of any point in dispute. He knew the law so well and saw so clearly the case that he often gave his ruling before the attorneys had argued their points. Sometimes the same fact led him to take the case up and argue it himself, giving all the bearings of the law, to the confusion of that side which happened to have the law against them! This was an occasion of some criticism and perhaps of some enmity at the time; but it was perhaps inevitable to one who had Judge Burt's antecedents as a trial lawyer. But all that has faded out. He was a man of absolute manly honesty, and if any one ever felt aggrieved by his rulings it was usually because that person happened to be on the wrong side, for the rulings were most always right. I loved him."

Thus Mr. Burt's high sentiments of honor as a gentleman led to a lack of what Western people call "push." He would not push for himself or his client in a manner which he deemed beneath the practice of a gentleman. Had he been willing to push himself to the front there are those among the best able to judge who say that there was no office in the gift of this State which he might not have had.

His modest career in politics was brought about more by the urgency of his friends than his own desire. He won in several contests without arousing a suspicion that he ever stooped from his high ideal as a Christian and a gentleman. One who knew him well and who would have little practical sympathy with his religion, said to me the other day: "I have known him intimately. I have practiced before him. I do not remember that I ever knew him to do one thing in which I thought he was intentionally wrong." He kept his hands clean and his heart pure in a field where too many lose their honor if not their reputation by methods which will not bear too close scrutiny.

When a committee waited on Mr. Burt to inform him of his nomination as Mayor of this city, he said to them: "I accept, gentlemen, and I thank you. But I give you warning that I shall not spend one dollar nor do one mean thing to secure this election. If I am to be elected I want it to be in a clean way." The civil service would never have needed any reforming if all politicians had planted themselves on a platform so entirely free from corrupt pledges to would-be-clerks of departments.

Down to the time of Abraham Lincoln's first election Mr. Burt was a Democrat in politics. But withal he was a lover of human rights and of personal freedom in such a way as led him to abhor slavery. The great agitations over the "Missouri Compromise," the "Kansas and Nebraska Act," and the "Fugitive Slave Law," had all for years been preparing him for a revolution in party affiliations. When, therefore, the issue between slavery and freedom was squarely drawn by Mr. Lincoln's canvass, he cut the ties which bound him by long association to the old party. He followed the nobler impulses of his heart, and went with the new party, voting for Abraham Lincoln, and so, as he and millions of others understood it, for freedom. So it proved. During the war he was an ardent patriot, and ever since his political belonging has been with the party which elected and sustained Mr. Lincoln and the war.

No analysis of Mr. Burt's life and character would be complete without some more extended reference to his fine abilities as a student and his great acquisitions as a polished and classical scholar. Reference has been made to the fact that he graduated from Union College with first honors at the early age of nineteen, also to his profound knowledge of the law acquired in a post-graduate course.

He mastered six languages. Besides his native tongue, he could read the Holland, German, French, Latin, and Greek. Of four languages he had complete control. He could read and converse in the Holland and German tongues as readily as in English.

OBITUARY.

Anthony Edgar Burt died at his home in Rensselaerville, Thursday morning, Sept. 9, 1886, at the age of seventy-four years. He was born at Claverack, Columbia Co., N. Y. His father was the Rev. Moses Burt, an Episcopal divine of more than usual ability and force of character. His mother, Catherine Ten Broeck, was a descendant of a family whose names are associated with the best and wisest in the early history of the State. Mr. Burt received an academic education at Claverack, and afterward pursued his studies under tutors until he passed his examination for admission to the New York General Theological Seminary. His health failing him at this time, however, he was forced to abandon his theological studies, and come to Rensselaerville to recover his health, and finding himself so much better here, he decided to make this his permanent home. Here Mr. Burt conducted a school for many years, the high character and thoroughness of which are familiar to all who know Rensselaerville. As a teacher he was unsurpassed; a ripe scholar, an indefatigable student himself, by his example and precepts he stimulated his pupils to do their utmost, not only in gaining knowledge, but in acquiring those traits of character which would make them true men and women. No man who has ever lived in Rensselaerville has exerted a greater influence for good than he. He was unacquainted with vice, with wrong of any kind, and had not a suspicion that it existed in others. Many young men and women in this village have honestly endeavored to be what Mr. Burt thought they were.

Mr. Burt was married, in 1846, to Laura Jarvis, who, with one child, a daughter, survives him. During the past three years he has been a helpless invalid, requiring the constant care and attention of wife and daughter, who affectionately devoted themselves to his service. He was buried from the Episcopal church, of which he had been a communicant for more than half a century. — [Taken from the Albany Argus, Sept. 11, 1886.]

Benjamin M. Burt's childhood was passed upon his father's farm at Springfield, Mass., but he very early developed a fondness for the life of a sailor. Before reaching the age of thirteen he had, without assistance, built two boats, and superintended the building of a third, a large sailboat of eight tons burden, called the Yankee. At the age of fifteen he had been two years captain and business manager of this boat, engaged in trading between Long Island and Springfield, stopping at the towns along the river; this, being before the time of railroads, proved a lucrative business. At this time William, an older brother, returned from sea, and his father gave him command of the Yankee, and set Benjamin to planting potatoes. This was too much. He detested farming, but he finished the planting and his farming experience that day. He left home the same night, and went to New York, where he shipped (May, 1836) for a whaling voyage on the Alto, Capt. Calder, of New Bedford. This voyage lasted eighteen months, the ship cruising over the North and South Atlantic, from Newfoundland banks to Capes

Horn and Good Hope. After his discharge from the Alto at New Bedford, he made three trips to Bay River, North Carolina, on the coasting schooner Atalanta. Capt. Newell, of New Bedford, shipping on the last trip as steward, came near being lost on Newport rocks, while beating out of the river on one of these voyages. His next voyage was from New York to Porto Rico, W. I., and back on the brig Pedrazza, Capt. Clark. Then came a voyage from New York to Matanzas, Cuba, on the ship Kosciusko, bound thence to Antwerp; but springing a leak she put into New York and discharged. Had his feet badly frozen on this mid-winter voyage. Then from New York up the Mediterranean to Alicante, Spain, and Iviza Island, and back, on the brig Kosato, Capt. Glidden. Then came a voyage from New York on the ship Oxford, Capt. Rathbun, of the Black Ball packet line for Liverpool. The ship reached the Mersey, but on account of the tide could not dock till next day. During the night came the great gale of January 6-7, 1839,* which cast the vessel ashore on Bootle beach, Cumberland County. The vessel fortunately struck on a sandy beach and did not go to pieces; it was badly damaged, but was repaired in Liverpool, and he returned in her to New York, and remained with her for another voyage to Liverpool and return. Again to Liverpool and return on the ship Roscoe, Capt. Delano, of the Swallow Tail line of packets. Then came a trip around Cape Horn to Central America and return in the ship Kosato. Then a return to the packet line for Liverpool on the United States, of the Black Star line. Leaving this vessel, he shipped at Liverpool on the brig Falcon, Capt. Turner, for the gold coast of Guinea, Africa. Here he remained sixteen months on a droger. Of the crew who went to the coast on this voyage, only the first mate and himself, then second mate, returned: the remainder of the crew dying of the coast fever. On the homeward passage the vessel was struck by a snow squall, when in sight of Holyhead, off the coast of Wales: every vestige of canvas was carried away, and the vessel driven violently toward the shore. Shipwreck seemed inevitable, but, providentially, there happened to be an old Welsh pilot among the new crew, sent out to bring the vessel home, and he brought them safely into Milford Haven, Wales, to the great surprise of the coast guardsmen, and the relief of those on board. No one but a Welsh pilot could have accomplished the feat in such a gale, and the presence of Bo's'n Stringer saved the lives of the crew. The vessel was repaired and taken to Liverpool, whence he shipped in the Hudson, Capt. Page, for New York. Then followed a voyage from New York to New Orleans and back to Boston on the ship Plato. From Boston to Calcutta on the ship Radiius, which he left there, and shipped on the Abbotsford for London. From London to Quebec and back to Greenock on the bark Clutha. From Greenock he went to Liverpool and shipped on the Atlas for Boston. From Boston to New Orleans on the ship Chaos, Capt. Wilson; leaving this vessel at New Orleans on account of rough usage, he tried to enlist in the U. S. Navy, but could not pass because of a crooked arm improperly set after being broken in childhood. He then made one trip, as fireman, on a Mississippi steamboat up the river. Returning to New Orleans he shipped on the Oregon, Capt. Glidden, for Marseilles, France, and back to New York; arriving there he went to the depot to see a shipmate leave for home, and after his departure concluded he, too, would like a ride in the cars; so he stepped aboard the first train (which happened to be on the New Haven, Hartford & Springfield Railroad), and was soon speeding over the rail, and unconsciously, toward home. He returned to Springfield, eleven years after his departure, to find great changes in his old home. His father had been dead nearly six years, and strangers occupied the old homestead. He at once sought out his mother, whom he found, with two of her children, in moderate circumstances, and, as she needed his assistance, he resolved to remain at home. He purchased of his mother the little house she had been able to save out of the estate of her husband; and, arranging it in two tenements, gave her a life lease of one, which she lived to enjoy for twenty-five years. In 1847, he secured employment in the establishment of the American Machine Works, in Springfield, and has remained there through changes of ownership and business to the present time, being now (1878) engineer at the Hampden Watch Company's Works. He was for some time construction engineer of the machine works, and often had entire charge of the finest and most difficult work ; he repeatedly declined the position of foreman. He went to many parts of the South to set up and operate the different rope and coinage machinery, cotton-presses, and steam engines built at their works. He became a member of Amity Lodge of Odd Fellows, September, 1875, and continues in affiliation, an honored and respected member. He married on a Wednesday, at Agawam, Mass., Cordelia, eldest daughter of Jason Frary. Their oldest son, Charles Benjamin, was born at Agawam. He enlisted, July 16, 1864, in Co. II, 8th Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, and was mustered into the United States service, July 20, 1864, for one hundred days. His regiment was stationed at Baltimore, doing garrison duty, during the whole period of his service. He was honorably discharged at Readville, Mass., Nov. 10, 1864. He is now (1878) tillerman, permanently employed, of Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1, of the Springfield Fire Department. He has been an honored member, since 1867, of De Soto Lodge, No. 155, and Agawam Encampment, No. 25, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Their second son, Frederick Augustus, has held a position in the Springfield post-office ; was a short time connected with the Sunday Telegram, and is now (1878) proof-reader on the Springfield Union. He has been corporal of a militia company ; clerk and second tenor drummer of Waterman's Drum Corps ; he is now clerk of Engine Company No. 2. He is Worthy Chief Templar of the lodge, and Worthy Degree Templar of the degree temple of the order of Good Templars. He united with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Aug. 24, 1871, and rose through its several gradations to the principal chair in 1874. He withdrew from this lodge, and was chiefly instrumental in instituting Amity Lodge, No. 172, Sept. 15, 1875, his name standing first on the charter. He was appointed, by the Grand Master, District Deputy Grand Master over it. He is also a member of Agawam Encampment of Odd Fellows, and a member of the State Grand Lodge. He introduced the Independent Order of Foresters into Springfield, May 10, 1878, his name standing first on the Charter of Court Massasoit, he being also deputy over it. Their fourth child, Ella Maria, graduated from the high school in June, 1874, and entering the teacher's training school, graduated the following year. She immediately received an appointment to teach in the public schools of Springfield, being first assigned to Auburn Street, and subsequently to the York and Emery Street schools. In December, 1876, she resigned her commission and accepted the position of assistant book-keeper in the counting-room of the Springfield Republican newspaper, which position she at present (1878) retains.

*Awful hurricane on west coast of England and in Ireland. The storm raged through Cheshire, Staffordshire, and Warwickshire. Twenty persons were killed in Liverpool by the falling of buildings, and one hundred were drowned in the neighborhood. The coast and harbors were covered with wreck (January 6-7, 1839). — [Hogden's Dictionary of Dates.

James Burt remained on his father's farm until 1840, when he went to New Bedford and shipped on the bark Dragon, Capt. Tabor, for a whaling voyage in the North and South Atlantic. They touched at Fayal, Western Islands, and at the Cape of Good Hope; cruised six months off the coast of New Holland (Australia), and put into Bellows Straits, next to Macomber Bay. On the homeward voyage they put into the Isle of France (Mauritius), St. Helena Bay, and Bahia, Brazil; and arrived at New Bedford after an absence of a little over two years. After remaining at home two years, he again shipped at New Bedford on the Winslow, Capt. Symonds, for another whaling voyage. They went to the Western Islands; cruised around the South Atlantic; then around Cape Horn and into Talcahuano, Chili; thence down the coast of Peru, where they cruised for five months; then to the Sandwich Islands; from there they went on the northwest coast (Kamtschatka), Asia; returned to Tombas River, Peru, and then cruised for five months on the "off-shore grounds" (Central Pacific), putting into Juan Fernandez Island for fresh meat and fruit. They then went into Valparaiso, Chili, to recruit for another voyage. On the eve of sailing James "took French leave" of the Winslow, and shipped on the Russian ship Hellions (Rising Star), Capt. Backloon. This vessel went to Callao, Peru; to Chincha Islands; back to Callao, and then cleared for Baltimore, U. S. A., making the passage in 112 days. He next went to Porto Rico, W. I., and Turks Island on the brig Frances Jane, Capt. Gardner, and back to Baltimore: from Baltimore in the Brazilian ship Feliciana, Capt. Antoine Frances, and joined the ship, with a runaway crew, in Hampton Roads, and sailed for Bahia, Brazil. There he shipped on the bark Maria Theresa, Capt. Howard, for Rio Janeiro; back to Bahia; thence to St. Thomas, W. I., and back to Philadelphia. He next shipped in the new bark Emily, Capt. Cope, for Kingston, Jamaica; touched at Port Royal, and back to Philadelphia. Here he shipped on the packet Shenandoah, Capt. West, for Liverpool and return. Again on the ship Lucas, Capt. Underhill, for New Orleans. At New Orleans he shipped on the Carnatic, Capt. Devereaux, for Queenstown, Ireland, and Havre, France, and return to New York. Again on the Carnatic to Liverpool, and return to New Orleans. A third time on the Carnatic for New York, where he was met by his brother Benjamin, who induced him to return home (1850), after an absence of fourteen years. Afterward he made Springfield his home. He was married to Margaret Elizabeth Coates at Rainbow, Conn., by Rev. C. B. Everest.

George Clinton Bliss and Emma Elizabeth Burt were married at Easthampton, Mass. They had child, George Clinton, born Oct. 4, 1875, and died Nov. 2, 1875. Residence, at Brooklyn.

Dexter Emerson Burt in 1842 shipped at New York on the Robert Bowen, bound for Angola, South Africa. The voyage lasted about a year, during which time he contracted the coast fever, which induced his return to Springfield to recuperate. By the time he had fully recovered, war was declared between the United States and Mexico. He enlisted for three years on the Falmouth, J. R. Sands commander, a second-class sloop-of-war, carrying four eight-inch guns and sixteen 32-pounders, which served in the gulf blockading squadron, under Commodore David Conner. He was in most of the engagements in which the navy participated, including the three-days bombardment of Vera Cruz and the Castle of San Juan de Ulloa, and was present at its surrender, March 27, 1847. The Falmouth returned to Boston in the summer of 1847, and he was discharged and returned to Springfield. He married at Enfield, Conn., Maria Goff of Chicopee Falls, and after her death married at Hartford, Conn., Sarah Kelsey, who after his death married Andrew T. Morse of Springfield, Mass. After his step-mother's marriage Marius E. adopted the name of Morse, and married under that name at Dummerston, Vt., Josephine E. Morse, a niece of his stepfather.

Nathaniel P. Burt was born and married at Springfield, Mass. He removed Oct. 12, 1852, to North Fairfield, Huron County, Ohio. At the commencement of the rebellion he enlisted, April 22, 1861, at Norwalk, Ohio, in a company of infantry, that was sent to Camp Chase to be mustered in, June 22d, as Company A, 24th Ohio Regiment. Here it was drilled until ordered into the field in West Virginia, where they remained in camp at Clarksburgh, until, orders coming for a forward movement, they passed through Buckhannon and Beverly to Huntersville, at the foot of Cheat Mountain. On ascending the summit of the mountain, they found the 14th Indiana in camp. After some time they were reinforced by the 25th and 32d Ohio and the 9th Indiana. The brigade on Cheat Mountain, under command of Gen. Reynolds, was attacked by Gen. Lee, with a force of 9,000 men, on Sept. 12, 1861, with the expectation of dislodging and capturing the Federal forces. To accomplish this, a detachment of 1,500 men, under Col. Rust of Arkansas, attacked from the east, Gen. Lee leading the attacking force from the west. Col. Rust, either from a prearranged plan, or finding the position too well defended, ordered a retreat. Gen. Lee was also forced to retire. On the night of the 2d of October Gen. Reynolds made the attempt to surprise the rebel camp at Green Brier, some twelve miles distant, leaving camp at twelve at night, with the 24th, 25th, and 32d Ohio, 7th, 9th, 13th, 14th, 15th, and 17th Indiana Regiments, with How's, Loomis's, and Davin's (?) batteries, thirteen pieces, and a small force of cavalry — in all, 5,000 men. They came at daylight in contact with the enemy's outposts at the Green Brier bridge, where the 24th Ohio and 7th Indiana drove them back within their entrenchments with considerable loss. The next night they returned to camp, and were engaged in erecting log houses, with port-holes, in which to pass the winter, when orders were received to join Gen. Buell's command in Kentucky, then forming near Louisville. They were placed in Gen. Nelson's division, stationed near Bardstown, on the Lebanon Railroad. While in camp here one of the men of Company I was arrested for shooting (while drunk) at a corporal. After a time this division was placed on board a steamboat, with orders to reinforce Gen. Grant before Donelson, but Fort Donelson was taken (Feb. 16, 1862) before their arrival. Arriving at Nashville on the 25th of February, the city surrendered the following Monday, when the army went into camp. The man arrested at the camp on the Lebanon Railroad for shooting at a corporal was here ordered shot. On the 5th of April Gen. Buell's army left Nashville, and this division reached Pittsburgh Landing on the 6th, at 5 P. M., to find Gen. Grant's army repulsed, and, with the exception of Gen. Lew Wallace's division, driven to within one-half mile of the Landing, their camps in possession of the enemy. Nelson's division of Buell's army could not cross in season to be of use that night, the 36th Indiana crossing first, the 24th Ohio next. The position of this division was changed several times during the night. The next morning the battle was renewed, with Gen. Nelson's division forming the left wing, the brigade in which was the 24th Ohio on the extreme left. For two hours this division steadily advanced, gradually pushing forward under a heavy fire of musketry and artillery, until the enemy began to waver, falling back faster and faster, until half-past ten, when they ran, and the battle was won. Sergeant N. P. Burt's gun was struck by an exploded shell, breaking the bayonet; the gun striking his head, knocked him down, and he was found insensible by Sergeant Merrill, who took care of him. After remaining in hospital at St. Louis for some months, where a Fourth of July dinner was given the wounded by the ladies of the city, two men — one of the 24th Ohio, and one of the 36th Indiana — were placed in his charge, as he was a non-commissioned officer, and he was ordered to report with them at the camp at Columbus, Ohio. While here Mr. Burt's wife and little daughter came to see him — the first meeting with his family since he enlisted. Here he received orders to take charge of twelve men of different regiments, and report at Cincinnati, Ohio. From the barracks at Cincinnati he was sent with a squad of men to join Gen. Buell at Louisville, Ky., where they were placed under Gen. Crittenden; and, marching against Gen. Bragg, met his army at Perryville, Ky. They then moved on through Bardstown, Danville, Crab Orchard, Mount Vernon, London, Barbourville, to Wild Cat, where they met the rebel Gen. Zollicoffer, who, having been misinformed of their strength, thought to bag them: but on meeting the Union forces exclaimed: "By —, Wild Cat must have kitteden!" The force returned to Nashville, where Gen. Buell was superseded by Gen. Rosecrans, Oct. 25, 1862. From Nashville they moved to Murfreesboro, and the two-days battle of Stone River; then, under Gen. Palmer, to Cripple Creek. Again Sergeant Burt is in hospital at Murfreesboro and Nashville until the middle of July, when he rejoined his company at Manchester, Tenn.; then across the Sequatchie Valley, through Dunlap, across the Tennessee River into Chattanooga, and on again to Ringgold, and the second battle of Chickamauga; again back to Chattanooga, where, under Gen. Grant, the rebels under Gen. Bragg were driven from Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge beyond Ringgold. After some time spent in East Tennessee, including a small fight at Rocky Face, they returned to garrison duty at Chattanooga until the middle of June, 1864, when they moved north, passing through Nashville, Louisville, and Cincinnati, to their old camp Chase (which they left in 1861) at Columbus, Ohio. During this three-years campaign Sergeant Burt was connected with the 24th Ohio, and the history of this regiment is his history. He participated in all the battles and marches given above, and was, with his regiment (after an exchange of photographs among the men of his company), mustered out on the 22d of June, 1864, the regimental flag, all tattered and torn, having been placed in the State House. Receiving his discharge papers, he went for a short time to the place of his enlistment, and then returned to his family at Springfield, Mass., happy in the thought of having served his country, and that his military duties were over. He now (1890) resides at Pierceton, Ind.

Mr. Burt is a man of varied experiences, is self-made in all that word implies, and from boyhood to middle age has ever been the pride of his many friends, and a power in the State where he lives. All through the years of his business life he has retained the habit of wide-awakeness, the quickness to see minutely, the power to seize firmly, to recall details, and has carried the sheaves of faculty bound up in his brain.

When seven years of age he came to Michigan with his parents. Five years later his father died, and he being the oldest of three sons, with the guidance of a noble mother, became manager of the farm, and entered into the struggle incident to pioneer life, with a determined will. His firm faith and strong resolve to become a successful man was ever foremost in the boy's mind, and before middle age he had achieved his desire. He had wealth, political power, and social prominence. He attended Albion College for a time, and the Michigan Central College for a year, now removed to Hillsdale and called Hillsdale College.

At the age of twenty-two he left the farm and visited Australia and South America. On his return, Northern Michigan had just begun to develop her extensive lumbering resources, and, with his instinctive foresight and energy, he entered the field, but not until 1858 did he personally interest himself in the business. He then located in East Saginaw, and built extensive mills and salt works on the river, and has since been closely identified with all the enterprises of that growing city. His own business is managed with great ability, as is also that of others when intrusted to his management. Office he has persistently declined, with the exception of Mayor of the city where he resides, until, in 1888, he accepted the nomination for Governor on the Democratic ticket, but was defeated by a small majority. He has been president of the Salt Association for fifteen years. As an ideal public-spirited citizen, he is identified with the growth and prosperity of the city, both morally and socially, as well as in its business successes. Having now reached middle life he has, in a measure, retired from active business, and in his magnificent home entertains his numerous friends.

The second Mrs. Burt is daughter of Dr. Israel Richardson of Greenville, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashley are living at Toledo, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Hay at St. Paul, Minn.; they have a son, Wellington Burt Hay, born Aug. 4, 1889.

Charles Burt graduated from Orchard Lake Military Academy in June, 1889; in the fall he entered the Law Department of the Ann Arbor University, but was taken sick in the winter, and did not return. He is now treasurer and auditor in the company's railroad office, and November, 1899, was, by order of the Governor, commissioned Brevet Lieutenant of Company E, Third Regiment Michigan State Troops.

Mrs. Burt was born at Guilford, N. Y. Their son's name is Le Van Merchant Burt.

Franklin Burt, at the age of 20 years, summer of 1861, at Corbettsville, Benson Co., N. Y., recruited a company of 83 men for the "Dickinson Company," 89th Regiment N. Y. State Vol. Infantry. Commissioned a Captain, with rank from October 31, 1861, by Gov. E. D. Morgan, the friends and patriotic citizens at Corbettsville presented Capt. Burt with a sword and such other accoutrements as pertained to his rank, and at a public demonstration on his departure added their blessings and prayers for the overthrow of the rebellion and all traitors.

The company went into barracks at Elmira, N. Y., in October, and by November fully one-half of them were lying in the hospital sick with the measles. Three of the company died in hospital at that place, before departing for the seat of war, and several afterwards lost their lives from the effects of the same disease.

The 89th left Elmira in December, 1861, and went into camp at Washington until the departure of the Burnside Expedition for North Carolina. While at Washington, Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson, accompanied by Vice-President Hamlin and other distinguished gentlemen, paid the Regiment a visit and presented a very beautiful "Stand of Colors," with appropriate and patriotic remarks. These colors were afterwards riddled with bullets in many battles.

The Burnside Expedition embarked at Annapolis for Hatteras Inlet, the 89th making the voyage in the ship Arcton, a staunch and comparatively new vessel of 900 tons burden, Capt. Kelly commanding. It was four weeks before the Regiment was able to disembark. On account of the rough weather encountered, the ship cast anchor off Hatteras and rode out the storm; during this time much fear was expressed that she might be driven into the breakers.

Went into camp at Hatteras for drill and target practice, and was afterwards stationed on Roanoke Island for several months. While here, all the troops on the Island, and some from New Berne, made an expedition into the interior, under command of Gen. Reno. The enemy was met in force at Camden, on the 19th of April, 1862, and after two hours' fighting, they were put to flight. This was the first engagement in which the 89th participated, and Capt. Burt was complimented on the field by the lieutenant-colonel commanding the regiment, for the conduct of his company during the fight. The men had marched thirty-four miles since two o'clock in the morning, and after the battle were glad enough to lie down; but by the time they had fallen asleep, they were again put on the march, and by two o'clock next morning had made eighteen miles more through the darkness, mud, and rain. Every man was now ready to drop; some had marched along fast asleep; stragglers were numerous, and none but the most enduring had kept in line. In regard to this affair the following order was promulgated:

HEADQUARTERS, DEPARTMENT NORTH CAROLINA.
April 28, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 30.

The General commanding desires to express his high appreciation of the excellent conduct of the forces under command of Brig.-Gen. Reno, in the late demonstration on Norfolk. He congratulates them as well upon the manly fortitude with which they endured excessive heat and extraordinary fatigue, on a forced march of forty miles in twenty four hours, as upon the indomitable courage with which, notwithstanding their exhaustion, they attacked a large body of the enemy's artillery, infantry, and cavalry, in their own chosen position, achieving a complete victory. It is therefore ordered, as a deserved tribute to the perseverance, discipline, and bravery exhibited by the officers and soldiers of the 21st Massachusetts, 51st Pennsylvania, 9th New York, 89th New York, and 6th New Hampshire Regiments, on the 19th of April—a day already memorable in the history of our country—that the above Regiments inscribe upon their respective colors :

CAMDEN, APRIL 19, 1862.

The General commanding desires especially to express his approbation of General Reno's strict observance of his orders, when the temptation to follow the retreating enemy was so great. By command of Major-General BURNSIDE.

During the summer of 1862 the 89th left Roanoke Island, and made an inland voyage via Elizabeth River and Dismal Swamp Canal to Norfolk; this was about the time of the evacuation of Norfolk by the enemy. Remaining here a short time, the Regiment was sent to Fredericksburg. About this time an order to forage on the enemy was promulgated, and "Pope's Headquarters in the saddle," was now in vogue. Capt. Burt was sent out on the Bowling Green road towards Richmond, in command of two companies to do picket duty, and was on the land of an old lawyer by the name of Bernard, who was a strong sympathizer with the rebellion. This man was quite free in expressing his opinions to the soldiers, and stated that the Yankees had no generals, and that Lee would winter in New York city. These sentiments did not agree with the convictions of the men in Capt. Burt's command, and as they were out of rations, not being relieved as expected, they had no compunction of conscience while appropriating to their own use numbers of the old rebel's hogs and sheep, not merely to satisfy the present cravings of hunger, but filling haversacks and knapsacks, and on returning to camp, supplying the remainder of the Regiment with fresh meat. A few days after this occurrence, Capt. Burt was ordered to report at the Headquarters of Gen. Burnside, who read to him several pages of legal cap from the pen of Mr. Bernard, reciting the wrongs perpetrated upon him by the soldiers. As his statements were substantially correct, Capt. B. had very little to say, except that Bernard was a rebel, and the soldiers doing duty on his premises were out of rations, neither of which facts, however, were adequate, and did not justify the taking of the hogs and sheep as permitted by Capt. Burt. The General remarked, that the encouragement of such proceedings would tend to license a state of morality not desirable to inculcate in men who would ere long be home again as citizens; and the next day he sent an order to the 89th that Capt. B. be placed in arrest and confined to the limits of the camp. This was, no doubt, in deference to the communication from Mr. Bernard,—who seemed to be a prominent citizen,—for in a few days Capt. Burt was returned to duty without trial.

In September, as Gen. Lee had entered Maryland, the 89th left Fredericksburg, and via Washington, marched to South Mountain, where they were engaged Sept. 14, 1862. In this action the 89th repulsed a bayonet charge of the enemy, with a severe loss to the latter, and saved a battery of five guns, which were almost within the rebels' grasp. Three days later the 89th fought at Antietam, near the stone bridge, now famous as "Burnside's Stone Bridge," and which bridge the Union troops were able to cross in the afternoon of same day. After crossing this bridge, the 89th were engaged in a charge on the enemy (A. P. Hill's troops), in which they were successful, but badly cut up. A sergeant and corporal from Capt. Burt's company, who were bearing the colors of the regiment, were shot dead, and the company lost many good men here, and at South Mountain also.

The only illness which kept Capt. Burt from duty during his term of service occurred about ten days after this battle. He was taken to the hospital at Sharpsburg, where he had a slight fever, joining the regiment again in October, at Pleasant Valley, Md.

In November the army moved down through Virginia, and went into camp near Falmouth, opposite Fredericksburg. On account of the deep mud, the entire army lay inactive until the enemy were well fortified in strong positions across the Rappahannock. On the night of Dec. 11, 1862, the 89th was sent down to the river to support a company of engineers who were to lay a pontoon bridge. The bridge was about half completed by daylight the next morning, when the enemy, being aware of the movement, placed a force on the opposite bank of the river, in the city and behind the shelter of buildings, to prevent the bridge from being completed. The engineers attempted many times to lay the bridge, and at every attempt some of them were shot. Late in the afternoon, as a last and desperate resort, 100 men and four pontoon boats were placed at the command of Capt. Burt and three other officers. Each officer took twenty-five men and a boat, and the whole party crossed the river, Capt. Burt's boat being the first to reach the opposite shore. The disembarking was done in the twinkling of an eye, and they rushed up the bank, feeling how desperate was the undertaking, and fully determined to fight hard to the last. After some firing, they succeeded in capturing 133 men, a lieutenant-colonel, and two captains, who belonged to the 7th Florida. The prisoners were sent down to the bank of the river in charge of a small guard, and a skirmish line thrown out, which advanced to the back part of the city, and held the enemy until the bridge was completed, when troops crossed and filled the city. The names of the four officers and 100 men who crossed in the boats were taken, and they were promised gold medals for gallant services. Gen. Burnside, in writing to Capt. Burt since the war, speaks as follows of this affair:

STATE OF RHODE ISLAND,

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 1, 1868.

CAPT. FRANK BURT:

MY DEAR CAPT.—I will take pleasure in writing to the Adjutant-General on the subject of the medals; and, if the direction has not been given to issue them, I will try to get it done by act of Congress. You certainly deserve the distinction. I remember your gallant services with great respect and pride.

Truly your friend,

A. E. BURNSIDE.

Two days later the memorable and disastrous battle of Fredericksburg was fought. The 89th lost many men and were compelled for the first time to retreat. They made a charge on the hill back of the city at night, after Meagher's Irish Brigade had fought there through the day without success, walking over the slain of this brigade on their way to the enemy's works. The next night it was determined to recross the river. The 89th were deployed back of the city to hold in check the enemy's pickets while the army was moving over the river. Before day in the morning the regiment was ordered to fall back gradually into the city, when they found they were alone. Earth had been placed on the bridge and no sound of footsteps could be heard. So the 89th was first to cross and the last to return at the bridge opposite the city. Next stationed at Suffolk, Va., where, on the 19th April, 1863, the 89th, together with a part of the 8th Connecticut, were placed on board a steamer on the Nansemond river below Suffolk, the steamer covered over with canvas to hide the men. She steamed down the river as if to pass a rebel fort, situated close to the river bank. Just before reaching the fort, however, she turned and ran towards the shore as far as possible, when the men jumped into the water and made for the fort; on account of the marshy ground they were compelled to go some distance around and take a road which had been built for entering in the rear. As the men were advancing by this road the rebels stationed a gun, charged with grape and canister, to sweep everything on the road, but for some reason they could not get it off, and in a moment the 89th and 8th Connecticut men were on top of the works, demanding a surrender. At this time Capt. Burt's orderly sergeant was shot through the heart, while on the parapet of the fort. It was not long until the rebels threw down their guns and hoisted a white flag: the prisoners numbered 130 men, together with five brass field guns and a large amount of ammunition in the magazine.

The Lieut.-Colonel commanding the 89th received the following in relation to this action:

HEADQUARTERS 3D DIV. 9TH A. C.,

SMALL POX HOSPITAL, April 21, 1863.

LIEUT.-COL. ENGLAND, Commanding 89th N. Y. Vol.

COLONEL: The General desires me to convey to you, and the officers and men of your command, his hearty congratulations and thanks for their gallantry and success in the affair of the 19th inst. By order,

G. W. GETTY,

Brig.-Gen. Commanding 3d Div. 9th A. C.

R. MCKENZIE, 1st Lieut. and A.D.C.

On the 3d of May, Longstreet's troops attacked Suffolk, and were repulsed. The 89th were engaged all day and gained ground—that is to say, advanced from morning until night. After being stationed at Norfolk until midsummer, the 89th were transferred to Gen. Gilmore's command, and next found themselves on Folly Island, S. C., in sight of Fort Sumter, and from a signal station near the camp the city of Charleston could be seen. Here they lay during the bombardment of Sumter and Charleston, during which time Capt. Burt was sent with a detachment of four companies to Long Island, which lay between Folly Island and the main land, and in sight of Secessionville, which was occupied by the rebels, and is said to be the place where secession originated. Remaining there a few weeks, he and his men were relieved and returned to the regiment, at the time the Colonel went home after recruits. The Lieut.-Colonel being in command of the brigade, leaving Capt. Burt, who was now the senior captain, in command of the regiment. He had done a field officer's duty for past year in capacity of Brigade Field Officer of the Day. While in command of the regiment, the troops on the Island were reviewed by Gen. Gilmore.

On account of antipathy which existed between the Captain and Colonel of the Regiment, Capt. Burt tendered his resignation some months before, while at Norfolk, which was disapproved. Thinking the opportunity favorable for now getting it accepted while in command of the regiment, he again tendered his resignation, and through the friendship of the brigade and division commanders, it was accepted, and he was honorably discharged from the service Jan. 22, 1864, having served two and one-half years. Was many times exposed to the most scathing and deadly fire of the enemy, yet never was hit with a bullet.

When departing for his home Capt. Burt was handed the following testimonial, signed by the commissioned officers of the regiment :

89TH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. V.,
FOLLY ISLAND, S. C., Jan. 30, 1864.

We, the undersigned, officers of the 89th Regiment New York State Volunteers, cannot part with our brother officer, Captain Frank Burt, without testifying to the high esteem in which he has been held by us as a brave soldier, a faithful and generous comrade, and for his uniformly gentlemanly deportment.

It is with the deepest regret that the link between us is now broken.

Our earnest wish, however, is, that in whatever sphere of life he may hereafter move, whether military or civil, he may always be upheld by those noble and upright principles which have hitherto characterized him, and that all his undertakings may be crowned with success.

One man in Capt. Burt's company served in the Mexican war in a Mississippi regiment, Jefferson Davis, Colonel. Another man was six feet four and three-fourths inches tall.

Capt. Burt was elected Grand Master of Masons for West Virginia, 1889. He was also on the Prohibition ticket for Congress in 1888. His farm has proved to be a valuable oil territory with many wells.

The Soldiers on Vallandigham.

At a meeting of the officers of the 89th N. Y. Volunteers, called for the purpose of expressing their views on the important question now agitating the public mind, Lieut.-Col. T. L. England was called to the chair, and Lieut. Morris was appointed secretary. Capts. James Hazley, Frank Burt, and R. P. Cormack were appointed a committee to draft resolutions expressing the sense of the meeting. Patriotic speeches were made by the officers, and the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted :

WHEREAS, Certain evil-disposed persons and violent partisan politicians, taking advantage of the military arrest of the Hon. C. L. Vallandigham, are endeavoring, by vituperation and misrepresentation, to impress and influence the public mind with the idea that an attempt is being made by the authorities, both civil and military, to invade the rights of free speech ; and

WHEREAS, Such a course has positive tendency to weaken the hands of the government, in a military sense, by distracting public sentiment, and to strengthen the enemy by leading them to believe the North is divided on the great questions of the day ; and

WHEREAS, We believe it to be the duty of every loyal man to counteract, so far as it may be in his power, the effects of these pernicious efforts ; therefore be it

Resolved, That we view with apprehension of serious alarm and feelings of profound astonishment the late demonstrations in the city of New York, said to have arisen from the course pursued by the government in the arrest, conviction, and punishment of Hon. C. L. Vallandigham of Ohio.

Resolved, That we condemn in unqualified terms the means adopted and the language used to inflame the public mind against the regularly constituted authorities because of said arrest.

Resolved, That his arrest was simply a military necessity, and fully justifiable under the circumstances.

Resolved, That we, as officers and soldiers, unqualifiedly and unreservedly, in this as in all things, pledge ourselves to sustain the President in his honest efforts to crush out treason and rebellion.

Resolved, That we note with feelings of real pleasure the absence from these highly inflammatory meetings of the party leaders whose words and actions go so far to make up the sentiments of the nation.

Resolved, That the language used and the implied threat against the Federal Administration contained in Gov. Seymour's letter to the Albany meeting was unnecessary, uncalled for, and unpatriotic.

Resolved, That the material interests of the nation demand a prompt enforcement of the conscription act, and that resistance to the provisions of said act by the citizens of any loyal State is, in our opinion, disgraceful and disloyal, and should meet with immediate and condign punishment.

T. L. ENGLAND, President.

Mrs. Burt was the daughter of Seth Hunt of Northampton, Mass., Treasurer of the Connecticut River Railroad. She was born at Whitesboro, N. Y. Mr. Burt's occupation is that of editor and publisher. He left Otisco July 12, 1847, when fifteen years of age, and entered, as an apprentice, the printing office of Hon. William A. Hawley, publisher of the Hampshire Gazette at Northampton, July 21, 1847, where he remained till Aug. 3, 1851. He then entered the book and job printing office of John and Lyman Metcalf at Northampton, where he remained five years, completing his apprenticeship with them. Went West in 1856. Spent several months at Beloit, Wis., in the office of the Beloit Journal. Met Hon. Bird B. Chapman, delegate in Congress, while going from Chicago to Beloit, who afterwards engaged him to act as foreman of his printing office in Omaha, Neb. Went to Omaha in December, 1856, going by stage from Iowa City to Council Bluffs. At that time there were no railroads in Iowa west of Iowa City. Arrived at Omaha Dec. 26, and entered the office of the Nebraskan, the oldest newspaper in the Territory. The population of Omaha was then under one thousand, and of Nebraska not over eight or ten thousand. In 1857 he became connected, as local editor and publisher, with the Bellevue Gazette, published at Bellevue, the oldest town on the Missouri River in Nebraska. This was his first attempt at editing and publishing. In October, 1858, he disposed of his interest in the Gazette, and returned to New England. The printing material was sold the next spring, and taken by an ox team to Denver, Col., and upon the types and press was printed the Rocky Mountain News, the first paper published in Colorado. In April, 1859, he became connected with the Springfield Republican as local and general news editor. In April, 1860, he commenced the publication of the Northampton Free Press, a semi-weekly newspaper. He obtained, by personal solicitation, nearly one thousand subscribers in Hampshire County. This paper was the first, and only one, to advocate in Western Massachusetts the first nomination of John A. Andrew for Governor.

In April, 1863, he founded the Holyoke Transcript, soliciting the first subscribers, and printing for the first year the paper in Northampton, making it mostly from the Free Press. In 1864 he sold the Transcript to Chas. H. Lyman, who had been associated with him in its publication. In December, 1864, he sold the Free Press, and became connected with D. L. Milliken in the publication of the weekly and semi-weekly Vermont Record at Brattleboro, Vt. In 1866 he disposed of his interest in the Record and returned to Northampton, where he published a volume of nearly 300 pages, "Burt's Connecticut Valley and White Mountain Guide," which had an extensive sale and was afterwards re-published as "Burt's Guide to the White Mountains through the Connecticut Valley." In April, 1867, he commenced the publication of the New England Homestead, a monthly journal devoted to agricultural interests. In 1868 he removed the office to Springfield and commenced the publication of the Homestead as a weekly family and agricultural paper. In 1871 he commenced the publication of the Saturday Telegram, which in 1873 was issued as the Sunday Telegram, at that time the only Sunday morning newspaper in New England west of Boston. In addition to the above he issued, in 1863, a prospectus for the Evening Free Press, to be published in Springfield. The list he sold to Edmund Anthony and it made the foundation of the Springfield Daily Union. Drifting almost by accident into the publishing and editing of newspapers, he has found in his profession unlimited enjoyment. The advocacy of those advanced principles which tend to elevate and improve humanity has occupied his time and thoughts. He was an early reader of the Tribune under Greeley, and was as a boy a Henry Clay Whig, a firm believer in a protective tariff, and an uncompromising advocate of the abolition of American slavery. In July, 1877, he established Among the Clouds, a daily summer journal, on the summit of Mount Washington, the first newspaper printed on any mountain in the world, and which was the pioneer in this country of summer resort journalism.

In 1888 he visited England as correspondent of the Springfield Daily Union, spent a month in London, visited the English Northampton and Springfield, and spent a short time in Paris.

Major Burt assisted in raising the first and second battalions of the First Rhode Island Cavalry. He was commissioned as Captain Dec. 14, 1861; as Major, July 11, 1862. A severe and protracted illness at Manassas caused the resignation of his commission, and he was mustered out of service Aug. 1, 1862. The following summer he was offered a commission as Major of Cavalry to serve in Washington for six months; it served three years, and was called the Third Rhode Island Cavalry. After remaining in camp at Jamestown, R. I., during the winter, the latter part of March it was ordered to New Orleans. He saw much hard service, being almost constantly engaged in skirmishing, etc. He was for several months at Thibodeaux, Acting Assistant Inspector on Brig.-General Cameron's staff. He was a very energetic and efficient officer. At the close of the war he was appointed Agent of the Freedman's Bureau in St. Martin's Parish. He was also, with John H. Gay, owner of the St. Helena plantation at St. Martinsville. It was his intention to make the South his home, and to remove his family there, but he contracted that terrible disease, yellow fever, at New Iberia, and fell a victim to it, Aug. 25, 1867, at St. Martinsville, St. Martin's Parish, leaving a widow and two sons.

Mrs. Mary H. Burt was the daughter of Rufus Burbank, Esq., of Newfield, Me. After the death of Major Burt, she again married, October 4, 1870, Dr. William von Gottschalek of Providence, R. I.

NINTH GENERATION.

425. MARQUIS W. BURT (*son of Artemas D.,*⁴¹¹ *g^lson of Abel,*²⁹⁶ *g^rg^lson of Abel,*¹¹⁶ *g^rg^rg^lson of Daniel,*⁷³ *g^rg^rg^rg^lson of Daniel,*³⁶ *g^rg^rg^rg^lson of John,*¹¹ *g^rg^rg^rg^rg^lson of Nathaniel,*⁴ *g^rg^rg^rg^rg^lson of Henry*¹), of Brimfield, Ohio;

born Aug. 4, 1837; died ;
 married Oct. 5, 1865, Mary Deming ;
 born Aug. 6, 1840; died .

CHILDREN.

Harry S.,	b. Aug. 25, 1866, m.	d.
Louis D.,	b. Jan. 21, 1872, m.	d.
Charlotte M.,	b. Dec. 18, 1873, m.	d.

Marquis W. Burt served three years and three months in the late war of the rebellion. He was the first to enlist from Brimfield, and the record of the 7th Ohio Regiment is his record. He was wounded June 9, 1862, at Port Republic; a Minié ball that passed through the under side of his arm above the elbow, was stopped by a memorandum book in his pocket, but not until it had broken three ribs. He was honorably discharged at Cleveland, Ohio.

The Burt, whose written family record is to follow on the next page, if he has a number, as a son, in the body of the work, that No. should precede his name; his name, followed by the name and number of his father, in parenthesis, then his place of residence.

In the case of a son without a number, his father's name and number should follow as above.

If a daughter, her father's name and number, one or both, should follow her name at marriage, on the line between the dates of her husband's birth and death and the dates of her own.

If written compactly, the same form can be used in the written family records as in the printed.

Nathan & Grace B. Burt lived many years in Saxon, Ill.
South of Champaign, Ill. Due to auto accident and was sure while died & buried - in years between 1933-1942.
Their son lived in live in Italy in Colorado, known as Colorado Springs. I believe (but was not sure).

Thomas A. and his second wife, Jessie Burt live in Urbana, Illinois - see their address in name.

The Liberty Co. of Am. new boys Thomas A. Burt as a regional manager. One of Thomas' daughters married Frank, the son of a man, died Josephine married an army man.

Charles Dunsen is a relative of mine and I know the others. Nate & Grace lived in the house in Saxon which my own grandfather, Albert Dunsen, built.
I can no longer
recall, Illinois would be dead.

Francis B. Schmidt 9-19-45.
